INTRODUCTION

The Church Index is a rating system that prioritizes U.S. counties based on need for planting New Testament churches. Need for starting new churches is determined by (1) the population per New Testament church ratio in a county and (2) the population per saved ratio. In the construction of the index, the population per New Testament church ratio is more heavily weighted than the population per saved ratio.

The scale for the Church Index ranges from 1 to 10. The counties with high values, e.g., 10 or close to 10, are counties most in need of new churches—these are counties with both high population per New Testament church and high population per saved ratios. The counties scoring low values, e.g., 1 or close to 1, are those with least need as compared to all other counties—these are counties with low population per New Testament church ratios and low population per saved ratios. Thus, this document is a planning tool to help the North American Mission Board prioritize areas for funding and programming.

The underlying dataset for computation of the Church Index is the data found in Religious Congregations & Membership in the United States 2000 (RCMS) authored by Dale E. Jones, et.al. In the RCMS study there are 149 religious groups reporting 268,000 congregations and 141 million adherents. In this Church Index report, the North American Mission Board has grouped the 149 religious groups into eight categories based on their similarity to Southern Baptists in regards to doctrine and propensity for evangelism. (This categorical assignment is listed below.) Number of congregations is totaled for the religious groups in each category. The number of New Testament churches is estimated by a mathematical formula that is biased toward a Baptist understanding of a New Testament type fellowship. Not all churches are assumed to be New Testament type churches; however, more than Southern Baptist churches are assumed to be New Testament churches. The saved population is estimated by a formula that operationalized the understanding of salvation experience, also from a Southern Baptist perspective. (See the Evangelism Index.)

Once the estimates of the number of New Testament churches and the number of saved persons were made for each county then the population per New Testament church ratio and the population per saved ratio were easily computed. In a few instances the population per New Testament Church ratio and/or the population per saved ratio are greater than the total number of people residing in a county. This is because the number of New Testament churches is estimated to be 0 or less than 1 by the mathematical formula and/or because the number of saved persons is estimated to be 0, respectively. (If the mathematical estimate of New Testament churches in a county was 0, a value of .2 was substituted so that the population per New Testament church ratio would not be undefined. Similarly, a value of .5 was substituted for the number of saved persons if the mathematical estimate of the saved population in a county was 0. Thus a county with no estimated New Testament church and/or no saved people was given more weight in the calculation of its Church Index).

There are two major sections of data included in this report. The first section lists all counties alphabetically by state. The second section repeats the same data, but counties are sorted in descending order based on their Church Index values. Thus counties in the first part of the second section have most need for starting new churches.

The color map at the end of the introduction displays the need for church planting in the United States. Counties shaded red have the greatest need. Conversely, those counties shaded white have the least need.
