To North American Members of the Executive Committee

Dear Fellow-workers:

At the Executive Committee meeting in London last summer the question was raised whether Executive Committee members who are not members of the Administrative Committee may attend the meetings of the Administrative Committee, provided this could be done without drawing on Alliance funds.

The answer of President Adams was, Yes, of course they would be welcome.

Naturally, the counsel of any Executive Committee member during the deliberations of the Administrative Committee would be most desirable. The Administrative Committee is simply the organ of the Executive Committee.

It is readily understood that any large attendance of members outside of the Administrative Committee is unlikely because of the considerable cost of travel. But occasionally Executive Committee members happen to be fairly close to Washington at the time when a meeting of the Administrative Committee is held and might find it possible to attend. This is to assure them that they will be welcomed.

If you find it possible to attend the meeting of the Administrative Committee scheduled for November 23, please inform the General Secretary as soon as possible, since it is necessary to make luncheon arrangements. Likewise, please inform the Washington office if you wish us to make a hotel reservation for you.

Most cordially yours,

Arnold T. Ohrn
