Our Pilgrim.

Our Lord's First Appearance Before Pilate.

BY REV. C. E. SPURGIN.

Place with me, I find in him a fault as well as in me.

We shall, this morning, consider the two accusations that were brought against our Lord, and the verdict of acquittal which Pilate gave in the language of the text: "I find in him no fault at all."

The first accusation was that he was a malefactor. "They answered and said to him, 'If we have done thee wrong, we would not have killed him; but he said, 'I find in him no fault at all.'"

Upon which we remark, first, that it was a novel charge. It was not for their mist, for when he stood before Caiaphas nothing was said of any evil that he had done, but only not what slender to invent. O Lord we marvel that any man should find fault with thee, for thou art altogether lovely, and there is in thee no spot or blemish to light upon. But I want to call your attention to this remarkable fact, that although the charge of being a malefactor was a grievous one, as any evidence, yet it was never denied by the Lord Jesus Christ. He might have cleared himself before the Roman procurator and by coming forth in triumph, he might have escaped from their teeth, but because he would stand in our stead; therefore, when men imagine mischievous things against him as he was a dead man, and as a dumb man he could not speak.

When I think of that word "malefactor," another word leaps to my lips directly, call him not malefactor, but benefactor. What a benefactor must he be who in order to benefit as many as he can, is branded as a "malefactor!" Only think that he who at this moment sits in the center of adoring angels should be called "malefactor," that he from whom the richest store of goodness all the saints in heaven and on earth are led, should yet be called "malefactor," that he who never thought of harm to men, but whose very soul is love, whose every word and thought has been hidden toward this (I say race) should yet be called "malefactor!" O earth, how couldst thou bear so grave a lie against the infinite goodness of the Son of God! Secondly, when the priests and scribes found that merely calling him a malefactor was not sufficient, these wretched men change their tactics, and, according to Luke, they charged him with setting up to be a KING. They said that he wrought miracles, that he forbade to pay trib-

First, I say he explained what is meant by being a king; and not only so, but fully that he did not explain it away. He said, "My kingdom; and also when Pilate said, 'Art thou a king then?' he said, 'Thou sayest that I am a king.' He was there and then a king." He was there and then a king. We are constantly told that the kingdom of Christ is a spiritual kingdom, and this saying is true; but I would have you take heed 't'at you do not spirit away his kingdom as if it were only a pious dream. Spiritual or not, the kingdom of Christ on earth is real and powerful. It is real some the less, but all the more because it may fitly be called spiritual. Jesus is even now a king.

Our Lord also said that his kingdom came not from this world; for that, I take it, is the most correct translation of the passage: "My kingdom is not of this world." It is a substantial kingdom, but it did not spring from the same source as the kingdoms of the world, neither is it supported, maintained, or increased by the same power as that which the kingdoms of the world depend upon. Christ's kingdom does not depend upon the force of arms, he would have his followers by these responsible aids. Christ's kingdom does not depend upon force, upon craft, policy, and diplomacy. It used to be said that an ambassador was a gentleman who was sent abroad to be for the good of his country, and I fear it might well describe full many an ambassador. What is the essence of diplomacy but the art of deceit? When statesmen are thoroughly honest, and are guided by principle, they are generally suspected, and an outcry is raised that the interests of the country will be sacrificed. But there is no diplomacy involved in the policy of the devil, and not of Christ. These were three great lies, for Jesus had preached peace, and not addition, his example was submission, not rebellion, his spirit was that of a servant, not that of a turbulent party leader. He had never said that men were not to pay tribute to Caesar, on the contrary he had said, "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's," and submitted himself to every ordinance of authority. He had never in their sense set himself up to be a king; if he had done so, many who were now his enemies might have been his partisans. The charge against Jesus of setting up to be a king is in essence in which they desired Pilate to detain them was utterly false, for when the multitude had been fed they would have taken him and made him a king, but he hid himself.

And please to notice that the charge of Christ being a king, did not come from the governing power. When Pilate asked our Lord, 'Art thou the King of the Jews?' our Savior wisely replied, 'Sayest thou this of thyself, or dost another tell thee of me?' Have you any reason to think that I am a leader of sedition? As the governor of the nation you have to watch carefully, for the people are seditious, have you ever so or heard anything of me that looks like an attack on your authority? Have you anything of your own knowledge that would lead you to bring a charge against me?' Pilate, knowing nothing whatever against him, and, indeed, scolding the Jews, he did not say anything about the Jewish people, whom he detested, replied angrily, 'Am I a Jew? Your own nation and your own rulers have brought this charge against you, not I.' A great point was gained when Pilate said this, the charge was shown to be a mere invention, since the eagle eye of the Roman procurator had never seen the slightest ground for it.

But yet I want you to note very carefully that the Lord never denied this charge in the sense in which he chose to understand it. He first explained what he meant by his being a king, and when he had explained it, then he openly confessed that it was not what slender to invent. O Lord we marvel that any man should find fault with thee, for thou art altogether lovely, and there is in thee no spot or blemish to light upon. The Family Circle

WALKING WITH THE WORLD.

The Church and the World walk together on the same path of duty. The World and the Church are one.

And walk with me this way. And walk with me this way. And walk with me this way.

And walk with me this way. And walk with me this way. And walk with me this way.

News in General

Washington, Nov. 27.—A synopsis of the reply of Gen. Logan to the Grant's article on Fishburne's case was printed here to day. It is lauded at in military circles, many army officers saying that it is full of inaccuracies and rapid blundering. The general opinion is that, in writing this reply, Logan has written himself an ode and materially helped Porter's case.

G. A. Longstreet is in the city. He is an old man now, three score years and ten.

Gov. Blackbar declines to bear an appellation to remit the fine of $500 against James Clarkson, of Lexington, charged with the distribution of indecent advertisements.

The Courier Journal correspondent this afternoon asked the President's Private Secretary if there was to be any more changes. "No other change other than those announced yesterday have been determined on," was the reply; "the White House has no more removals to make."

There is a certain well-defined uneasiness among many Government officials which may be compared to the state of mind of a man under a tree in a thunder-storm with a lively interest in where the lightning will next strike.

It is stated that the letter of Attorney General Brewster to the President's removals was made up and written by that official, but by Brewster Cameron, the Attorney General at taking his signature to it—O. O. S., in Courier-Journal.

Chicago Tribune: The removal by order of the President of certain Washington officials who have exhibited in various ways active sympathy with Dorsey, Brady and the Star-route gang will be received with universal approval outside their own set.

Palmdale Press (Esp.): President Arthur and Attorney General Brewster have struck the Star-route gang hard by their action in the removals just announced, which scores a long step forward along a path where the Administration has the support of all the Republican party.

Paris, Nov. 27.—Five thousand members of the French Trade Union assembled yesterday and extended greeting to the twelve delegates from the English unions, who came to Paris to represent the workers of the latter bodies in favor of the completion of the channel tunnel.

A bill has been distributed in Duplex, containing among the signatures those of Gambetta, Paul Berni, giving all persons a right to leave ten men any institution as to whether their bodies be buried or cremated.

Dublin, Nov. 27.—Some more persons were arrested this afternoon in connection with the murder of Detective Cox. Dublin is progressing favorably in the Police Court to day the men Devine, Woodward and Ryan were arraigned and charged with the murder of Cox. Detective Eastwood identified Devine, but was not sure about the other two prisoners. The prisoners were remanded to a meeting of the Corporation to-day a resolution was passed on motion of E. Dever Gay, recording the horror of the C.P. corporation at the outrage.
