

IT IS WELL.

It is well that we and his husband, as well as the child... The evening child, it is well...

It is well that the leader in the revival... It is well that the one at evening-time...

It is well that the one at evening-time... It is well that the one at evening-time...

MISSIONS.

Dr. Cough writes from the field, one hundred miles west of Ogden, dated Jan. 18th...

Rev. D. S. Spencer, a missionary of the American Baptist Home Mission Society...

After seven years' labor, one hundred and thirty converts have been gathered...

The American Wesleyan missionaries in Bulgaria have been maltreated and their work broken up...

The Presbyterian Board of Home Missions has just passed, very much as does our Board of Missions...

Berlin, with its 1,100,000 population is said to have only 400 churches and scarcely 100 ministers of the gospel...

There are now six churches in the capital of Madagascar, in one of which the work was begun Sunday...

Of the seventeen principal groups of islands in the South Pacific Ocean, nine are now open to Christianization...

TEMPERANCE.

"GONE TO THE DOGS." It was Peter Ditcher who had gone to the dogs...

What changes there were! Some he found alive and well. Others alive, but ill. Others dead...

If Peter's friend had in any doubt as to the meaning of this expression, the tone and manner with which the information was conveyed...

Of course he used it, like everybody else, as a word of derision and pleasure. And what a pleasure!

When John Ditcher endeavored to save his friend's life by the scores, and to reveal the secret of it all, he was shown it in pantomime...

The drink he was that did it. If he had not been for the drink, he would never have "gone to the dogs" at all...

And not only Peter, but millions beside, have "gone to the dogs" through the accursed drink...

It is to-day, "gone to the dogs" through the accursed drink, O, be sure it will be less easy to stop to-morrow than it is to-day...

Think how few who "go to the dogs" ever leave them. Those who will not stop...

Think what you may be. If you like, you may be a good, honest, respectable man...

Think what you may be. If you like, you may be a good, honest, respectable man...

MY WIFE.

First—I wish—like an earnest wish. For a husband here, who is a good man...

I wish—I wish—like a loving wish. For the days of the past again; For the days, but filled with my smiling love...

I wish—I wish—like a devoted wish. For a son like the best I ever saw; For an eye that in sorrow dimly looks on me...

I wish—I wish—like a kindly wish. For the wish of all children that save; For a life that shall be mine another day...

The Use of an Enemy.

Always keep an enemy on hand, a bribe, hearty, active enemy. Remark the use of an enemy.

1. The having one in proof that you are somebody. Why was my enemy, worthless people, never have enemies...

2. An enemy is, to say the least, not partial to you. He will not flatter. He will not exaggerate your virtues...

3. In addition, your enemy keeps you wide awake. He does not let you sleep at your post. There are two things always keep watch, namely, the lawyer and the laborer...

4. He is a detective among your friends. You need to know who your friends are, and who are not, and who are your enemies...

5. It is a great mistake to put what is called the honey-moon at the beginning of married life. We believe that it more frequently comes at the end...

6. The next best thing to having a hundred real friends is to have one open enemy.—Christian Advocate.

The Devil's Fair Servants.

The devil has a great many servants, and they are all very active. They ride in the railway coaches, they sail on the steamboats...

"There's no danger." That is one. "Only this once." That is another. "Everybody does so." This is the third.

"By-and-by." That is the fourth. When tempted to give the Sabbath up to pleasure, or to do a little labor in the work-shop or the counting-room...

So great is the influence of a sweet minded woman on those around her that it is almost boundless. It is to her that friends come in seasons of sorrow and sickness for help and comfort...

Sweet Minded Women.

So great is the influence of a sweet minded woman on those around her that it is almost boundless. It is to her that friends come in seasons of sorrow and sickness for help and comfort...

It is a great mistake to put what is called the honey-moon at the beginning of married life. We believe that it more frequently comes at the end. Then the extravagant expectations of youth and inexperience have been chastened and modified by the whole some realities of life...

WILLIE'S PROPOSAL.

"It's just that I was a little nervous. And you were a nervous, Mary. And that I gave you a golden ring. Upon which I have a golden hair."

"Let's play that I had a golden crown. And that you had your golden hair. And that you please them all."

"No, Willie, that is not so; Let's both of us get our silver shoes. And I'll wear away to the left."

"No, Willie, that is not so; Let's both of us get our silver shoes. And I'll wear away to the left."

"Then, try, dear, as far as a bird. I'll follow you, do not fear. And, if I love, but a soldier, dear. You'll be my Valentine, dear? If you touch me, I'll marry."

"Butter, butter, who has the button?" asked a glove that had been dropped on the toilet-table.

"I've got it," answered Jimmy's sister. "I've several buttons, in fact."

"No," put in the closest-door, "I have it myself; the carpenter gave it to me."

"I had a dozen or so," said a boot, looking rather down at the heel.

"And I have a hundred or more," yawned the stay-chair, "but they don't button anything; they don't belong to the working class."

"Here's a bachelor's button," remarked a vase of flowers on the bureau.

"There's a button-wood tree in the garden," said the button-hook. "I suppose you all grow there."

"I know better than that," posted the closest-door. "Mine grow in the veins of the earth, where all the precious metals are found. It's a poor relation of theirs."

"And we," added a pair of ivory sleeve-buttons, "we grow in the land of the white elephant. We were carried from the jungles and the swamps of the Indies at the head of the troops."

"My buttons," said the glove, "were nearly related to the gem which Cleopatra dissolved for Antony. They were mother-of-pearl grown in the shell of the pearl oyster, for which divers risk their lives."

"That's something of a fish story," thought Jimmy's jacket. "My buttons are only glass; but glass is some times made of sand, and who knows but their atoms may have been swept down to the sea-shore from 'farthest India' which is contained."

"And I," whispered the bachelor's button, "I sprang from a tiny seed, with all my apparel of blue and purple wings, like the Aerie from the jar which the fisherman found on the beach. It is a miracle how I was packed away there!"—St. Nicholas.

Do Not Wait.

"I do not understand much about it, but I suppose that I must wait," said Rufus.

"Wait for what?" "To be made Christian. My teacher says that I can do just myself, so what is there to do but to wait?"

"Then, you can not care yourself? Christ must do that—but up you, quick! there is much for you to do. You remind me of the fable of the wagoner; did you ever hear it? His team got stalled in the mud. Dingo went upon his knees and begged God to help him out of trouble. How hard he cried! 'What are you doing?' exclaimed a man who was passing. 'Up, neighbor, put your shoulder to the wheel, and with the horse! God will help those who help themselves.' Do you understand and Rufus? If you were ill, would you cure yourself?"

"No." "Would you sit quite still and wait to be made well?"

"No, I should send for a physician; I would do just as he said."

"Right! Now your soul is sick with sin, it will die forever unless you use the means to get it well. What can you do? You must go to the great physician, Jesus Christ, and ask Him to save that soul. You can do just as He commands. You save His promise: 'He that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out.'"

Johnny's Tears.

Johnny had a great trial. He was sitting on the floor, looking over all his pictures, and baby toddled up and tore one right across, one of the very prettiest. Johnny called out, "O, mamma, see!" and began to cry.

"Johnny," said mamma, as she took baby away, "did you know tears are said to water?"

Johnny checked a sob and looked up. "No," he said with great interest; "are they? How did you find out, mamma?"

"O, somebody told me so when I was a little girl, and I tried a tear, and found it was true."

"Real salt water," asked Johnny. "Yes, try and see."

Johnny would very gladly have tried, if he could only have found a tear. But by that time there was not one left, and his eyes were so clear and bright it was so hard to get any more that time. He looked at the torn picture, but it did not make him feel bad any more. All he could think of was whether tears tasted like salt water.

"Next time I cry I will find out!" he determined.

That very afternoon while climbing over the top of the rocking-chair the fall and got a great bump. It was no more for any little boy, and too much for Johnny, and he was just beginning to cry loudly when he happened to think what a good chance this was going to be to catch some tears. He put his finger to his eye, in fact, for there had not a tear come yet worth mentioning, and now that his thoughts had wandered from the bump, he could not seem to cry about any more. So that chance was lost.

"I can't get a single tear to taste of, mamma!" he said ruefully.—Sunshine.

A Mother's Lesson on Home Etiquette.

A mother who tenderly cares for her children, recently wrote down for their 'punctual observance,' the following rules, under the head of CHILDREN'S ETIQUETTE.

Always say, "Yes, sir;" "No, sir;" "Yes, papa;" "No, papa;" "Thank you;" "Good night;" "Good morning;" Use no slang words.

Clean faces, clean clothes, clean shoes, and clean finger-nails indicate good breeding.

Never leave your clothes about the room. Have a place for everything, and everything in its place.

Rap, before entering a room, and never leave it with your back to the company.

Always offer your seat to a lady or old gentleman, your feet on cushions, chairs, or tables.

Never overlook any one when reading or writing, nor read or talk aloud when others are reading.

Why Tardy Be He.

"I'm going to run away," said Teddy to Dick. "I'm going over to Aunt Nally's house."

Teddy was a very little boy. Dick was a great big Newfound dog. "Don't go far, dear," called mamma after them.

"No-o, ma'am," said Teddy. "Mamma said not to go far," he whispered to Dick. "It isn't far to Aunt Nally's. It isn't more than a mile, Dick, and she'll make me come taffy."

Then Teddy pushed the gate open. And what do you suppose Dick did? Why, he laid himself down to sleep over him, and growled and growled all of his white teeth. Teddy tried coaxing, but Dick wouldn't be coaxed. Then to get a mule's switch, but Dick wouldn't be driven. Then Teddy tried to climb over the pickets, but Dick caught hold of the killed skirt with his teeth, and held him back. So at last Teddy made up his mind that he didn't really want to go to Aunt Nally's house. But he couldn't help telling mamma all about it, and was so sorry. Mamma smiled, and patted Dick's great black head.

"Then it was my dog who minded, and not my little boy," she said.

"But I'm going to all the rest of the 'tation,'" said Teddy, earnestly.—Yield's Companion.
