The Family Clerk.
PETERSEN.
My dear old mother with all our love...

What did the boys read?
"Are you troubled last your boy shall read dime novels and the drest full papers which are thrown in at the door, filled with gaudy stories of adventures, and even crimes?"

Two boys went to hunt grapes.
One was happy because they found grapes. The other was angry because he found no grapes.

Two boys eating their dinner, one said "I would rather have something other than this." The other said "This is better than nothing."

It was but a day or two since that a young school girl was manifesting anxiety over the problem of her last duty. Ought she to go to a foreign mission field, or devote herself to work at home?

War on the Cigarettes.
A crusade against the cigarette has been started among the children of the public schools of Philadelphia.

Look Out for the Voice.
You often hear boys and girls say words when they are vexed that sound as if made up of a snarl, a hiss and a growl.

The Equinox.
It can not be denied that the Equinox are a dirty people. They have not the facilities for keeping themselves clean.

For Today.
To-day's duty; fight to-day's temptation; and do not distract yourself by looking forward to things which you can not see, and could not do.

Some men have queer ideas of Christianity. They seem to think they can be saved by indulging in the most unchristian spirit.

Beat it west with her mother to the house of a friend to attend a woman's Foreign Missionary meeting.

WORLD KNOWING.
I have just received your issue of the 1st of August, and I am glad to hear that you are so successful in your work.

THE ORPHANS' FRIEND.
I have just received your issue of the 1st of August, and I am glad to hear that you are so successful in your work.

Truly great men are called by isolation in their interior. It is in the solitude of their greatness that they are thought for others.

Many years ago the errand boy employed by a publishing house in Boston, was sent to procure from Edward Everett the proof sheets of a book he had been examining.

When the editor of the book arrived at the house of the errand boy, he found him sitting on the floor, reading a book.

Two boys went to hunt grapes. One was happy because they found grapes. The other was angry because he found no grapes.

Two boys eating their dinner, one said "I would rather have something other than this." The other said "This is better than nothing."

BY-AND-BY.
There's little mischief-maker. That's a stalling half our brain.

It is still a by of the bootmaker. With his very leveling glass.

STRENGTH OF A BREASTED LIND.
This in the right side, under edge of skin, leaving its pressure, connecting the pads on the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side.

It is still a by of the bootmaker. With his very leveling glass.
