Graves and Salvation.

In one of the addresses at the recent "Luther Memorial Celebration" in this city occurred this somewhat remarkable statement:—"The world of mind has outgrown..."

As to the question whether "Christianity has had its day" or not, we have nothing to say. So long as man continues to be man...

A good, we suppose, is something that a man believes. The question, then, is narrowed down to this: "Is it necessary that a man believe any thing in order to salvation?"

PHILADELPHIA Correspondent of the Standard says: "Dr. O. C. B. King, an new Bible society, has returned from his Western tour, and is now off again upon an extended trip in the South. He reports grand receptions wherever he went and altogether delighted with the Baptist people he saw and met. What is now needed is that the man who listened to his earnest and thrilling speeches should send in the money required for Bible work. I learn, on good authority, that the thank offering voted at Saratoga amounts at the present writing to little more than the original resolutions. Churches and individuals in this neighborhood have sent in most of the money thus far received, and there is no new large sum compared with what is imperatively demanded. It is to be hoped that Dr. Biting will speedily be cheered by liberal responses from all quarters to his great appeal.

Our Little Folks.

Mr. John C. Searle recounts the following of a favorite dog. One day when the house was closed, the dog was heard scratching at the outside door and making such a noise that the question was raised whether any intruder might be about the premises. At length, nothing was discovered, the dog was sent about his business, and the door again closed. At ten o'clock the servant rushed in with the alarming information that one of the children, a little lad of four years, was not in his bed. By some oversight, his absence had not till then been noticed. Search was made, lights were brought; an accident at the bath possibly was feared. But the little boy was found in a corner of the room, fast asleep in a chair, resting his head on a little table; and the dog, his faithful guardian, lying down at his feet to protect him. Mr. John C. Searle says: "I feel so glad and sick, may I say one; 'I can't help scowling.' 'We can not agree with you; you can help it; for the minister changes his mind, your scowling will vanish like the dew before the morning sun. Custom tells us that we must wear smiles when we have visitors; and it is assumed that their presence is to let us keep them, on to please our friends. 'Shopkeepers exhibit their articles at the door and windows; so people expect that they will keep within the words of the mouth and the expression of the countenance.' 'Life is not entirely made up of great evils or heavy trials; but the perpetual recurrence of petty evils and small trials in the ordinary and appointed routine of the Christian's life, with the failings of those about us, with their infirmities, their bad judgment, their ill breeding, their perverse tempers; to endure all these when we deserve attention, and to regard them where we expect thanks; to bear with the company of the disagreeable people whom Providence has placed in our way and whom we have provided on purpose for the trial of our virtues, these are the best exercises of patience and self-denial, and the better because not chosen by ourselves. To bear with vexation in business, with disappointment in our expectations, with interruptions in our retirement, with the annoyances of domestic disturbances—short, with whatever opposes our will or contradicts humor—this habitual acquiescence appears to be more of a trial than any other. It is more than any little rigors of afflictions or of our imposing. These constant, in evitable, but inferior evils, properly improved, furnish a good moral discipline, and might, in the day of ignominy, have superseded pilgrimage and penance.'—Hannah Moore. 'Learn to dare stockings early, and then always see that your own are in order. Do not let a button be off your shoes a mile longer than needful. It takes just about a minute to sew one on, and O how much nearer a foot to us in a trimly buttoned boot than it does in a shoe with one loose! Let it take just about a minute to make the simple articles of clothing. We know a little miss of seven who could sew a button, and who also made the whole of a new calico dress for herself, and pieced a large bed-quilt. She was not an over-laid child, either; but a merry, romping, laughing, only daughter. But she was smart, and she did not die young either. Indeed we have seen her very few days of complaint, whatever their grandmothers may think. So never be afraid of overdoing the needle. Help your own and can study over the business daily. Do not get in the habit of looking over your things, and you will like it wonderfully. You will have an independent feeling that you need not wait for any one's convenience in repairing any of your things, but that you can be before hand with all such matters. The relief to your weary mother will be more than you can ever estimate.

Consequently.

A lady went into one of the large stores in Boston, where there are a number of young girls who act as errand-boys, and asked to look at a boy's hat. Not being quite sure what she should do, she said, after looking at several, "I will look at a number of hats if you will, if you can find one conveniently," thinking the girl might have to search through a pile of them, and regretting the trouble it was causing.

The face of the young girl brightened, as she said, with real gratitude, but with a pathetic tone, "No one ever says to me, 'if you can find one conveniently.'"

Also, that we forget to be polite! We may be so as to be tired to wait on customers, and we do not say, "Thank you," or say anything to us. We are doing anything for you. That person makes many friends who go through life with a smile and a kind word.—Congregationalist.

Avoid the scolding tone. A third mother may find it hard to do this; but by the time she will get good by observing the rule. The tone of scolding wears upon the throat, just where a woman who is not overstrong is apt to feel the ache of extreme fatigue. The child, too, who are great imitators, will be sure to catch the scolding tone, and will talk to their dolls, to one another and by and by to the other children, very much as their mothers are now talking to them. All by means avoid this bad tone, all you who govern others.

A Dog's Felicity. Mr. John C. Searle recounts the following of a favorite dog.

One day when the house was closed, the dog was heard scratching at the outside door and making such a noise that the question was raised whether any intruder might be about the premises. At length, nothing was discovered, the dog was sent about his business, and the door again closed. Women Doctors in India.

The plan for employing female doctors in India... Sir Charles Napier, so distinguished for his military services in India, on receiving notice from the English Government making him governor of Soide, with additional pay, and ordering a triumphal column to be cast from the guns he had captured in a Bombay battle, he would not let me go back to my wife and girls; it would be to me more pay, glory and honor. This is the story of a woman who has surrendered their swords to me on the field of battle and their kingdoms have been conquered by me and attached to my own country. Well, all the glory that can be desired is mine, and I care so little for it that the moment I can, all shall be resigned to live quietly with my wife and girls. No honor or riches rouse me; they are agreeable only as they enable me to do good to those poor people. Oh, if I can do any good to serve them, how do much blood has been shed in accordant war, I shall be happy. May I never see another shot fired!"

A Soldier's Estimate.

On the 15th of the month, the number of students in the medical college... The number of students is certain to be large, and in a few years each of the three presidencies will have a staff of female doctors thoroughly familiar with the language and manners of the climate. They will reduce the sum of human misery far more than a dozen orders admitting ladies with an English name on their names, for which they are hopelessly disqualified. We are glad to notice also that the new doctors intend to make a business of their work, to claim fees from those who can pay, and to earn, if they can, good incomes for themselves. One fortune made by a woman as a doctor in Calcutta will keep the English name regular than any amount of philanthropy in individuals, who after a few years die out.—Spectator.

Women Doctors in India.

The plan for employing female doctors in India... Sir Charles Napier, so distinguished for his military services in India, on receiving notice from the English Government making him governor of Soide, with additional pay, and ordering a triumphal column to be cast from the guns he had captured in a Bombay battle, he would not let me go back to my wife and girls; it would be to me more pay, glory and honor. This is the story of a woman who has surrendered their swords to me on the field of battle and their kingdoms have been conquered by me and attached to my own country. Well, all the glory that can be desired is mine, and I care so little for it that the moment I can, all shall be resigned to live quietly with my wife and girls. No honor or riches rouse me; they are agreeable only as they enable me to do good to those poor people. Oh, if I can do any good to serve them, how do much blood has been shed in accordant war, I shall be happy. May I never see another shot fired!"

A Soldier's Estimate.

On the 15th of the month, the number of students in the medical college... The number of students is certain to be large, and in a few years each of the three presidencies will have a staff of female doctors thoroughly familiar with the language and manners of the climate. They will reduce the sum of human misery far more than a dozen orders admitting ladies with an English name on their names, for which they are hopelessly disqualified. We are glad to notice also that the new doctors intend to make a business of their work, to claim fees from those who can pay, and to earn, if they can, good incomes for themselves. One fortune made by a woman as a doctor in Calcutta will keep the English name regular than any amount of philanthropy in individuals, who after a few years die out.—Spectator.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION FOR 1884.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION presents the Announcement of its Fifty-Seventh Volume. Its unusual character, both in the range of its topics, and its remarkably brilliant list of Contributors, will, we trust, be accepted as a grateful recognition of the favor with which the paper has been received by more than 300,000 subscribers.

Some Humorous Incidents of a Summer Vacation in the White Mountains, by Nugent Robinson.

Our Little Folks.

Mr. John C. Searle recounts the following of a favorite dog. One day when the house was closed, the dog was heard scratching at the outside door and making such a noise that the question was raised whether any intruder might be about the premises. At length, nothing was discovered, the dog was sent about his business, and the door again closed. At ten o'clock the servant rushed in with the alarming information that one of the children, a little lad of four years, was not in his bed. By some oversight, his absence had not till then been noticed. Search was made, lights were brought; an accident at the bath possibly was feared. But the little boy was found in a corner of the room, fast asleep in a chair, resting his head on a little table; and the dog, his faithful guardian, lying down at his feet to protect him.
