Girls In Action Fairs Planned

Five Girls in Action Fairs have been scheduled for March, April and May of this year, according to Miss Nancy Jo Watson, Kentucky Girls in Action director. The dates and places are:

March 31 — Porter Memorial Baptist Church, Lexington; April 21 — First Baptist, London; May 5 — Wildwood Baptist, Ashland; May 12 — First Baptist, Bowling Green; May 26 — Lone Oak Baptist Church, Paducah.

Missions information provided by foreign, home and state missionaries will be the main thrust of the fairs, Miss Watson said. In addition, local GA organizations have been asked to provide booths and activities concerning the organization and missions.

Each fair begins at 11:00 a.m., with lunch and an hour of participation in a midway of booths and games. After this, girls will be able to hear each of the missionaries share their experiences in their particular field of service. Dismissal at 2:00 p.m. will follow a brief informal period of information and inspiration led by the state Girls in Action director.

Due to the overwhelming response to the fairs last year, only GAs in grades three through six may attend this year. Each person wishing to attend should mail a $1.00 registration fee, which includes cost of lunch, to the WMU Office, Kentucky Baptist Building, Middletown 40243. Reservations must be received three weeks in advance.

Additional information is available on each fair by contacting Miss Watson at the state headquarters in Middletown.

Teacher Improvement Workshops Announced

Three Teacher Improvement Workshops have been scheduled for workers with preschoolers and children, according to Mrs. Betty Allnatt, children's work director in the Kentucky Sunday School department.

The three workshops, scheduled for March 19, 20 and 22, will be held at Shively Heights Baptist Church, Louisville; Third Baptist Church, Owensboro; and Latonia Baptist Church, Latonia; respectively, beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Mrs. Allnatt stated that she had assembled one of the best faculties available for these sessions. Leading the workshop on nursery work will be Mrs. Willa Ruth Garlow, author and special worker from Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. Miss Peggy Troutman, director of preschool work at Immanuel Baptist Temple in Henderson, will direct the session for work with four and five year olds.

Working with grades one and two will be taught by Miss Barbara Crawford, director of children's work at Green Acres Baptist Church, Louisville.

From Nashville, Tennessee, will come Miss Elsie Rives and Mrs. Dot Hammatt. Miss Rives, a consultant in the children's division of the Sunday School Board, will lead session of work with grades three and four. Mrs. Hammatt, a special worker for the Tennessee state convention, will direct sessions on work with grade five and six youngsters.

LATE NIGHT VISITORS AND EMPTY CUPBOARDS
Luke 11:5-8 (TEV)

In the parable of the "Importunate Friend," most commentators stress persistent prayer, the role of the neighbor who was bothered, and the "how much more" of God's willingness to help. Surely this is correct, but my mind turns to the man who had to ask for the help when he had late night visitors and empty cupboards. Has the situation no effect upon him?

This man's situation can make us at least think of what it means to ask for help. It at least shows that we will encounter some situations which we cannot handle, and we will need to ask for help.

To ask for help is a threat to our selfhood, it should not be, but it is. To ask for help means to admit our humanity to another person, and that is hard. It means admitting we cannot make it alone; revising our self image; humbling ourselves.

The importunate friend was probably embarrassed at not having enough foresight to be prepared for unexpected situations; he was probably humbled by having to arouse his neighbor — yet he did it and was persistent.

In the shear living of life, in the exercising of our responsibilities as humans, we too encounter late night visitors with our cupboards desparately empty; family tensions; work problems; personal inadequacies; our own spiritual bankruptcy — these and countless situations find us beyond our resources asking "where do we go from here?"

Our heritage makes it a bad thing, at least a weak thing to admit our inability and seek help from another person. The strange thing is, that as Christians, we are confessed failures in the game of life — yet more often than not, we are not honest enough with ourselves to live with or up to our confession of need.

The mark of weakness, it seems, is the unwillingness to ask for help in situations we cannot handle. We as Christians have the obligation to give and seek help, counsel, and advice; after all, did not Paul commend us to "bear one another's burdens." ■

Theological Education: Ministry Is The Goal

By Jonathan A. Lindsey

EDITOR'S NOTE: Jonathan Lindsey, who teaches religion at Judson College in Marion, Alabama, spent the 1972 fall semester at The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Kentucky, as a visiting professor of church history. He took a long, hard look at the seminary students of today, and here is his report.

Students reflect their culture

During the past decade Baptist churches in the south have experienced some interesting changes in the nature of their ministries. They are finding themselves entering into all sorts of new and intriguing ways of confronting their communities with the Gospel, new ways of teaching, preaching, and convicting lost men of their sin.

Students in seminary today reflect their cultures. They are mirrors of the churches which produced them. They grew up in an era when Baptist churches in the south were opening their doors to social work, bus ministry, new experiences in worship. They are the products of Good News, Tell It Like It Is, and other trends in the communication of the Gospel. They are the ones who directly experienced curriculum changes in the early, middle and late sixties. Students in seminary today are the product of the Jesus revolution and the charismatic movement of the sixties and early seventies.

Seminarians reflect the culture and churches which produced them, which gave them a vision of a world that needed to be changed. Their churches taught them that if the world was hungry, it must be fed; that if it was naked, it must be clothed; and, that if it was hurting, it must be comforted. Their churches taught them that the real ministry of Jesus Christ was to communicate the Gospel to all men, in all places, so that the prayer "thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth" would be a reality.

Churches send students to seminary with ideas about changing the world, for God's sake.

Change and no-change

Just as Baptist churches have experienced changes during the decade of the sixties and entry into the seventies, theological education in that same era has experienced change. After all, the schools have to keep up with the churches in order to provide adequate leadership. But, in this era of change there is some no-change.

First, some of the changes. Students are reflecting greater varieties of personal background than a decade ago. They are entering seminary after working at non-religious jobs, after serving as US-2 and journeymen, after taking graduate degrees in other disciplines, and right out of our Baptist and state-supported colleges and universities. They enter a poverty-oriented tradition as children of an affluent culture, accustomed to comforts, even when some have appeared to reject those comforts.

Many of the changes are purely external. Some men wear their hair longer, or have more of it on their faces. Some of the women wear their hair shorter, and occasionally will wear trousers openly. Life styles have changed, and some seminarians are even learning how to relax and get some recreation. But, look — there, in the churches, men are wearing their hair longer, some with more of it on their faces. Women are wearing their hair shorter, and occasionally wearing trousers openly.

One thing, however, has not changed: the individual student is highly motivated to learn the most effective means of communicating the Gospel to a needy world. There is no change in the basic commitment of seminarians to their personal relationship to Jesus Christ as the Lord of the world and of all men. This is the commitment on which seminaries are built, and to which seminaries minister. This is the basic commitment I knew as a student, and which I experienced as a teacher of seminarians in Louisville last fall.

Foundations of ministry

So, when students get to seminary, what happens to them? Three areas of the student's life and experiences are guided toward greater maturity. These areas are the spiritual, the academic, and the personal.

The spiritual dimension of a student's life involves many experiences, ranging through conversion, call and approval by a local Baptist church for application to seminary. But there is a dimension which is a sort of umbrella for all of these past experiences. An awareness of the Spirit of God active in His world is brought to the seminary by the student. It is enriched, enlarged, and made greater during his experience there. Some students have difficulty seeing God active in a world that is hungry, naked, and hurting with the pains of war. Some students have to learn the hymn of praise of Job. Some students have to learn to see God active in lives other than their own. In all these ways the student is helped to be aware of the truth of the ancient Israelite who said that the earth is the Lord's, and all they who dwell therein.

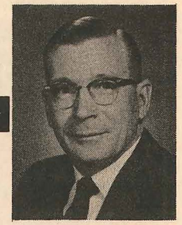
The academic experience of the student is grounded in the wisdom of those who established theological education among Southern Baptists. As far back as 1859, when Southern Seminary was begun, the curriculum of theological education was securely grounded in three basic disciplines: Biblical studies, historical studies, and theological studies. The courses in pastoral ministry and preaching were predicated on the student's clear foundation gained in the basic disciplines.

Baptist seminaries have not wavered from that wisdom of the nineteenth century, but have sought to secure the foundation as fundamental to all functional ministries. Preaching, teaching, ministering to the sick and needy, as well as ministering through music and children's education, finds validity in the churches as long as there is the solid foundation of Biblical, historical, and theological support.

The personal dimension of each student is the skills and dreams which he or she brings to seminary. The skills will get polished, honed, and developed, and the dreams will get expanded. One student who speaks well may find that he also can relate well to children, and may voluntarily work with children in an inner city project. Another student who is quiet, and not quite sure of reaching out to people, may learn to reach out as he works in a psychiatric clinic. A young woman who is a skilled musician may also find her skills and dreams used as she leads a congregation in new forms of worship through music, prayers, and reading Scripture.

What happens to those students churches send to the seminary? They get "thoroughly furnished, rightly dividing the word of truth." The whole person is guided toward a greater maturity as a minister of Jesus Christ. Their theological education is for ministry. ■

DALEY OBSERVATIONS



A New Day Dawning For Baptist Men

Hopefully there is a new day on the Baptist horizon. It's been in the process of dawning for several years but its arrival appears more certain now than ever. It's the day of aroused concern and more meaningful participation of men in the mission thrust of Southern Baptists.

Every honest observer admits our Baptist women have carried the load in mission concern and education through the years. It's fearful to think where we would be without the tireless labors of our ladies, especially in the informing and inspiring of our boys and girls in missions. At long last there's a stirring among Baptist men which is exciting.

A dramatic demonstration was a scene in Atlanta on March 2 when 1,000 men were provided an unusual mission inspiration. For those of us in denominational work Baptist meetings are so fast and furious that it is difficult to find inspiration in all of them. Not so with the Prayer Breakfast sponsored by Georgia Governor Jimmy Carter, the Brotherhood Commission, the Home Mission Board and the Georgia Baptist Convention.

Merely to be one of 1,000 men eating together at 7:00 a.m., attentively considering the challenge of the gospel for America and joining in prayer for the spiritual needs of our land is a meaningful experience. To join hands, heads and hearts with Baptist men from hundreds of churches in Georgia and from fourteen other states is unforgettable. To have a governor speak of the reconciling power of the gospel and of his own dependence upon Jesus Christ for daily decisions is to have renewed hope. To hear the earnest prayers of businessmen, a congressman and a black official of a Southern city is to feel the power of the gospel.

Such a well planned and impressive Baptist meeting required the efforts of many but the Governor's Prayer Breakfast in Atlanta showed the master touch of Brotherhood Commission Executive Secretary Glendon McCullough more than anyone. Here's a man of extraordinary ability and inexhaustible zeal. In him Baptist men have their greatest hope for leadership in the kind of mission involvement long overdue.

There was something to provide a high moment of inspiration for each of the 1,000 men in Atlanta. For some it was hearing a governor's Christian testimony, for others it was praying with business and government leaders, for others it was hearing reports from Worcester, Massachusetts, and Los Angeles, California, of mission miracles and for others it was singing, "Precious Lord, Take My Hand," with a black girl from Memphis. All of these warmed the heart of this Baptist editor but it was the prayer of James Netters, a black man who is an administrative assistant to the mayor of Memphis, that brought tears to my eyes. When he sought the Lord to forgive his hatred for white brothers and to fill his heart with love and peace toward all men, the gates of heaven were not far away.

Here's a prediction. The Easter Home Mission Offering this year will exceed the goal of $6,600,000 and the Atlanta Prayer Breakfast will have contributed measurably to its success. Thanks, Mr. McCullough, for such leadership. Put such a prayer breakfast eventually in reach of all Southern Baptist men.

Deadly Apathy Toward Television Programming

There's something more disturbing than the permissive and irresponsible attitude of the television industry toward moral standards in programming. This is the apathy of viewers toward such programming. Judging from information in a reply from a protest letter to W.H.A.S. for showing, "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?", few viewers cared enough to register their sentiments.

A letter to W.H.A.S. program director, Dick Sweeney, brought a reply from Charlotte S. Sharp, community relations director for the station. She reports that this movie resulted in little comment, either good or bad, when compared to the removal of a soap opera for a space shot or the inauguration of a president. She said she had received five letters and four phone calls by March 2 which was eight days after the showing. An ironic contrast is that the station received thirty-six calls during the telecast asking if the movie was in color or black and white.

Can it really be that such telecasting aroused no more negative response than this? With several hundred churches in Louisville, including more than 100 Baptist congregations, and hundreds more in the W.H.A.S. viewing area, how can such silence be explained? Where are the pastors to say nothing of concerned laymen? No wonder television executives feel no restraint in disseminating moral pollution.

Assuming the accuracy of the report of the reaction, I cannot believe it reflects the true attitude of the viewers. Soap operas are admittedly popular but who would have thought their preemption for a space shot or the inauguration would have stirred more negative reaction than a filthy R-rated movie shown on prime evening time? Or who would have guessed that four times as many viewers would have expressed concern whether a movie was in black and white or color than would have complained about the moral influence of the show? Indeed, it may be later than we think.

BAPTIST FORUM

APPRECIATES 'GOOD WORD'

Dear Editor:

I want to thank Frank Owen for his wonderful article, "Speak a Good Word for the Pastor."

It will not be long until I will observe my 50th year as a Southern Baptist preacher. When I read Dr. Owen's article my mind went back over the years in thought about the many preachers with whom I have worked and many others with whom I have been associated. You will not find, as a group, a more dedicated, sacrificing and unselfish group of men in any vocation.

Jesus Christ set the example for today's Baptist preacher: "Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand" (Matthew 4:17); ". . . and the poor have the gospel preached unto them" (Matthew 11:5); "Then Philip went down to the city of Samaria and preached Christ unto them" (Acts 8:5). There is also the commission Christ gave His church in Matthew 28:19-20 and Acts 1:8.

When I was ordained the preacher's text was II Timothy 4:2, "Preach the Word," and Colossians 3:16, "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom."

Today's Baptist pastor has to be almost superhuman to do all that people expect him to do. His first responsibility is "to preach the Word." He must have the time for this Word to dwell in him and then on to the people.

RELIGION AND POLITICS

Dear Editor:

I note with interest the article, in the February 24 issue of the Western Recorder, by Frank Sharp entitled "Internal Revenue Service Puts Pressure on Churches." His first paragraph reads, "By some quirk of administrative thinking in Washington the government has apparently stipulated a new requirement in return for church tax exemption — namely, that the churches refrain from political, economic and social activity."

While I deeply resent the involvement of government in Christian affairs, since I am a strict separationist when it comes to matters involving church and state, I am also well aware that many churches (so-called) have become very little more than fronts for political activity.

Let the action by the Internal Revenue Service be a reminder to all of our Baptist churches that we ought first and foremost to declare the unsearchable riches of Jesus Christ and leave politics up to our Christian people as they bear their influence in places of responsibility.

MEETING WITH JESUS

Dear Editor:

I read many announcements of trips to the Holy Land. Maybe the reason I am not much interested in those lands is I haven't visited them.

The first account we have of Jacob's meeting God was at Bethel. After Jacob's sons had brought sorrow to him they returned to Bethel for help.

That leads me to say that I like to go back to the country church where I first met Jesus. This means much to me and I meet Him there often.

I believe that it is more important to meet Him today than it is to see where he lived in the flesh.

Columbia, Kentucky Bayard Antle

A SOUTHERN BAPTIST CHURCH

Dear Editor:

Baptist are peculiar people. Especially when it comes to their church life. Some prefer a "Missionary Baptist Church" and some like the "Conservative Baptist Church." Still others like the "Community Baptist Church" while others insist on a "Bible Baptist Church." Some like the "American Baptist," the "National Baptist" or simply the "Regular Baptists." Everyone insists on an "Independent Baptist Church."

Confused by it all? Who wouldn't be? Is there one church that fits all of these requirements? I believe your "Southern Baptist Church" will. For you see it is not only "Southern" in character for it is also "American" and "National" in scope. Most all "Southern Baptist Churches" are as "Regular" as you can get, they are mostly "Conservative," "Missionary," "Community" and "Bible" centered. And God knows they are the most "independent"!

So you see, your local "Southern Baptist Church" is the only Baptist Church that fulfills all of the above requirements.

Why not give your "Southern Baptist Church" a try?

Mortons Gap, Ky. Edward Owens

MISSION ACTION

Dear Editor:

I like to read better interpretations of Mission Action than reported in the March 3 issue of the Western Recorder. My interpretation of mission action is the work of the church being carried on by every member, in every place, every day of the week. There are no geographical boundaries. The work being done in the name of Jesus Christ is more important than in the name of some organization. The Bible doctrines of election and Christian calling together with the priesthood of every believer can help us interpret mission action.

Since God calls every Christian to mission action and gives gifts to each person to do the work, then the New Testament priest offers himself as a living sacrifice to God. The scriptural plan of mission action is very simple. God receives the glory when the mission action is acceptable and pleasing to him.

Kentucky Missionary Slain In Taiwan

Miss Gladys Hopewell, Southern Baptist missionary in Taiwan for 19 years, was found slain in her Tainan apartment shortly before 9:00 p.m. on Sunday, March 11. She apparently died of strangulation.

Miss Hopewell, 57, of Hopkins County, Kentucky, had been dead some three hours when the murder was discovered by her maid and a university student entering her locked and darkened apartment.

According to C. Robert Beard, Southern Baptist missionary associate in Tainan, the main electrical switch to the apartment had been pulled.

Beard reported at noon Monday that the police were working on the case but that details of the murder were not yet clear. The police are seeking the maid's missing husband.

Initial information, Beard added, indicated no evidence of forcible entry into the apartment nor of robbery.

Funeral and burial arrangements were incomplete early Monday pending decisions by Miss Hopewell's family. As soon as those details are made known the body will be released to the U.S. embassy in Taiwan. Miss Hopewell's survivors include her mother, Mrs. Bernice Hopewell, and a brother, Joseph C. Hopewell, both of Talladega, Alabama.

Miss Hopewell is the fourth Southern Baptist missionary to die by violence in 20 months. Mr. and Mrs. Paul E. Potter were beaten and stabbed to death in their Dominican Republic home in July, 1971. In January, 1972, Miss Mavis Pate was shot and killed in an ambush by Arab guerillas in the Gaza Strip.

The pioneer of Baptist student work in Tainan, Miss Hopewell had directed since 1954 a student center located in the midst of the National Cheng-Kung University campus. She taught English conversation at the university as well as at the center.

Her mission responsibilities included the publication of a Baptist student magazine and serving as advisor for a Woman's Missionary Union in a local church.

Taiwan was Miss Hopewell's third mission field. Following appointment by the FMB in 1946, she did evangelistic work in Tsingtao and Shanghai, China. In 1950, after living under the communist regime for more than a year, she left China and came to the States.

The following year she went to Bangkok, Thailand, where she directed religious education at Grace Baptist Church until she transferred to Taiwan in 1954.

Miss Hopewell was graduated from Carson-Newman College, Jefferson City, Tennessee, with the bachelor of arts degree and from Woman's Missionary Union Training School (now part of Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Kentucky) with a master of religious education degree.

KBC Sponsors 'Jesus Festival'

Tuesday evening, April 10, will be an historic occasion for Kentucky Baptists. On that night the Kentucky Baptist Convention will sponsor a "Jesus Festival" at Freedom Hall in Louisville.

Designed as an outreach effort to young people, the festival will feature youth choirs performing various folk musicals, congregational singing of youth oriented tunes, individual testimonies and a performance by the nationally known folksingers, The Spurrlows.

According to Eugene Quinn, state music director and coordinator of the Jesus Festival, the festivities will begin at 5:30 p.m. when youth choirs from across the state will mass to sing various folk music selections. Most of the groups will be singing selections from "Love," "Encounter," or "Celebrate Life."

About 6:30 p.m. the regular activities will get underway as youth choirs from Third Baptist Church, Owensboro; First Baptist Church, Bowling Green; First Baptist Church, Mayfield; and Northern Kentucky Association are joined by a youth choir from the General Association for an hour of singing, testimonies and performances.

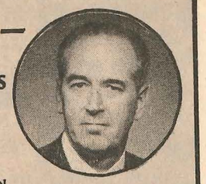
The Spurrlows will climax the evening's activities.

It is hoped that everyone will be on their way home by 9:30 p.m.

Executive secretary Franklin Owen pointed out that the "Jesus Festival" takes the place of the annual Youth Night which the convention has voted to sponsor annually. "What we are doing in this service is trying to reach young people with the gospel of Christ. We are using a different medium, music. But music is the medium that young people respond to best these days."

Owen added that the "Jesus Festival" gives pastors and other youth workers an opportunity to bring non-church young people to a music program they will enjoy but, also, a music program that will proclaim Christ as Lord of all life.

Old Paths— New Paths



FRANKLIN OWEN

Executive Secretary, Kentucky Baptist Convention

I recently spent some time in Birmingham, where I lived just before and just after World War II, but from where I have been gone 25 years. Like all of the other cities, it has sprawled since that time to cover unbelievable expanses of territory with its conglomeration of subdivisions.

The people I knew and the business I had was in both the old and the new parts of megalopolis.

I knew all of the old paths, but I did not know the new, nor did I know how to connect up the two. I found myself trying to match memory with modern signboards and pointed arrows.

I belonged to the past, to the old, whose ways I knew well. But, here I was in the setting of the new, to which I needed to belong, whose paths I had to travel. The bridging of the two was the problem.

It is a parable of life, the time comes when every man finds himself belonging to the old, whose familiar paths are precious and easily followed, but, becoming criss-crossed and entangled with, and related to new paths, whose ways he must learn, whose paths he must travel, if his journey is to continue to be purposeful and fruitful.

The old paths I followed with casual, almost thoughtless automation. New paths required careful watchfulness, reading, receptiveness, learning, following.

New paths required faith, trust, belief in the signs I had not yet been able to prove. Repeatedly, I gave up and turned back to inquire further, only to find that I had not gone far enough, I had not exercised sufficient faith.

Again, it is a parable of life. Every man belongs to the past, but he is also touching the future and he must bridge between the two or he is done. It is thus that he continues to have significance and usefulness. The past will not change, it is done. The future will be out of reach except as we, with continued appreciation for the old, weave our way across the junctions, relating the new and the old, bringing between yesterday and tomorrow, through our own brief today.

Alexander Pope said; "Be not the first by whom the new is tried, nor the last to lay the old aside."

—Frank Owen

BAPTIST WORK IN ISRAEL —

Of Bridges, Faces And Gates

by Bob Terry
Associate Editor

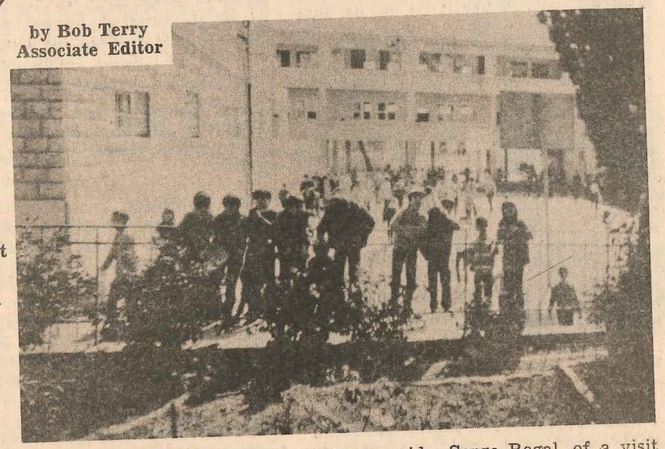
"What we are trying to do is build bridges of understanding between our Jewish neighbors and our Moslem neighbors," remarked James Smith as he addressed a group of 18 Baptist editors who were touring Israel as guests of the Israeli government.

Smith, from Georgia, and his wife Elizabeth are stationed in Ashkelon. They are the only Christians in this growing city. Formerly they ministered in the Gaza area. Now, using contacts with their Gaza friends, the Smiths bring together Arabs and Jews for social interaction and language study. Arab friends come to the Smith's home for an hour's study. This is followed by a fellowship time for both Moslems and Jews. After this hour, the Moslems leave and the Jews spend the next hour in study of the Arabic language.

"This is the only interaction between Jews and Moslems in our area," Smith earlier told us. "Through our Baptist Center in Ashkelon we are trying to help our neighbors better understand each other."

James Burnham of Georgia, who serves as director of the Baptist Camp and Conference Center at Petach Tikvah, told our group that the Baptist camps are the only camps in Israel where Moslem, Christian and Jewish children live and work and play together. "It is not without problems," he confided. "At the beginning of the week there is sometimes hostility between the groups. But by the end of the week there is often crying when new friends are separated."

Another "bridge" offered by Baptist work in Israel is education. In Nazareth, Baptists sponsor elementary and high school education. Total school enrollment of the two numbers slightly more than 600 persons. The school's director, Dale Thorne of Oklahoma, said the Baptist school is the largest private school in the Nazareth area. There is a waiting list of students who want to attend, Thorne said, despite its rather steep tuition and a free public school system. A graduate of the Baptist high school has the equivalent of a college freshman's education in the United States, we were told.



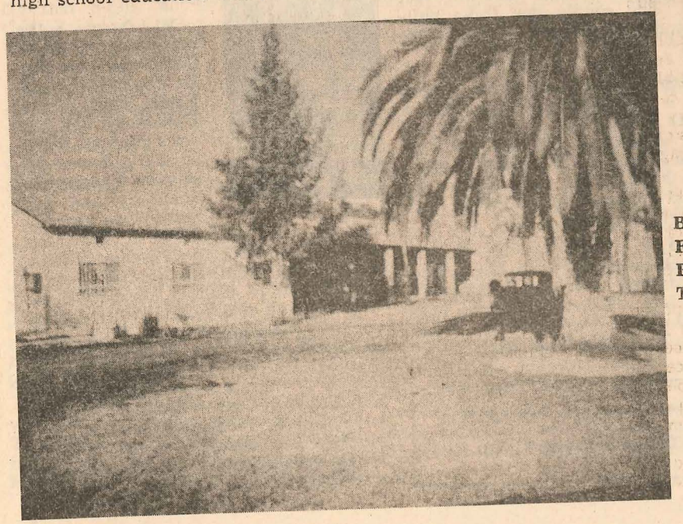
Children in Baptist school at Nazareth

In a meeting with the Jerusalem area missionaries, our guide asked Mrs. Merrill Moore if she had noticed a change in the attitude of the people in Gaza where she and her husband, a surgeon, work. Mrs. Moore answered the question by relating an incident that transpired only a few weeks before our meeting in late January. Mrs. Moore told our guide, Serge Regal, of a visit from a friend who had been in the Gaza Strip two years before. The missionary asked her guest if she had noticed a difference in the people. The guest replied, "Their actions are different. They are not as openly hostile. But their faces are still the same."

Mrs. Moore observed that the hostility had substantially lessened in Gaza but the deep feelings of the people had not changed. Our guide's response indicated that his major concern was the lessening of hostilities. But Mrs. Moore left no doubt that the major goal of the Gaza mission was to change the hearts of the people of Gaza; to remove the hatred sketched on their faces and replace it with the love and compassion possible through Jesus Christ.

What made the incident especially meaningful to me was that I had known Merrill and Patty Moore before their appointment to Gaza. We had been together in Michigan where I had served a church and they were studying Arabic at the University of Michigan. Eleanor, my wife, had been their three year old daughter's Sunday School teacher and we had visited in each other's home. To see their commitment to minister to the people of Gaza was a moving moment.

Perhaps the most symbolic of all Baptist work we saw was Jerusalem House. Located in the former Jordanian section of Jerusalem, Jerusalem House ministers mostly to students. It offers recreational facilities, a coffee shop, a research library and study rooms. But it is the site of Jerusalem House that is symbolic. On the back of this Baptist property is the old Mandelbaum Gate, one of the few former crossing points between Jordanian Jerusalem and Israeli Jerusalem. Looking out a second floor window toward the pile of rocks and debris that remains of that once strategic site, it occurred to us that this was a most appropriate place for Baptist work. From this location Jerusalem House offered entry to both Arabs and Jews at the same time. Yet, it offered them more than entry to a neutral ground. Jerusalem House offered them entry to a new relationship with God through Jesus Christ. And, as a result of a new relationship with God, a new relationship with each other could be possible as each acknowledged the other as "brother."



Baptist Farm at Petach Tikvah

Perhaps the symbolism of Jerusalem House summarizes the work of Baptists in Israel. Baptists are working with both Jews and Moslem trying to build bridges of understanding. Baptists are proclaiming a new relationship with God that can change hostile faces to compassionate ones. Baptists are opening gates of opportunities where men of differing races and creeds can stand before God and call one another "Brother."

As we reflected on what had been witnessed in Israel, a statement by a prominent Jewish rabbi came to mind. Speaking at the first Baptist-Jewish Scholars Conference, this rabbi reminded the group that Baptist missionary work in Israel was not manipulative. Baptists have made themselves a part of Israel and are improving the land as they work according to the dictates of their faith, he had said.

From a Baptist farm growing peanuts and citrus crops; to the Dugith Art Gallery, proclaimed by critics as one of the leading galleries in the country; to National pastors and leaders for many of the Baptist congregations; to a Baptist missionary, Robert Lindsey, who is one of the world's leading authorities on the Hebrew language; we believe the rabbi's observation is accurate.

I thank God for the dedication of the 14 Baptist families and the two missionary journeymen now under appointment of our Foreign Mission Board to serve in Israel. I was proud to be identified with a group serving as they are. ■

What Are Missionaries Paid?

By Jesse C. Fletcher
Director, FMB Mission Support Division

The Scripture says the servant is worthy of his hire. How much hire is the foreign missionary worth? Actually, the Foreign Mission Board that represents Southern Baptists has never attempted to establish that fact.

A review of the sacrifices and contributions of the men and women scattered throughout the world for many years, makes it obvious they have done that which money cannot buy.

Perhaps a Biblical answer is the best response to the Biblical question. "Of these the world is not worthy."

The Foreign Mission Board has attempted to provide support rather than salary for its foreign missionaries through the years. As the monetary situation around the world fluctuates, so does support fluctuate.

The average Southern Baptist is not able to stay abreast of the changes and what they really mean. Because of this, he is highly susceptible to misleading statements, i.e., the missionary couple receives only $4,000 a year; or the missionary couple receives $14,000 a year. In fact, a missionary family with three children receives an average of $8,521.76 plus housing while on the field.

Of course, there are other support dimensions. The missionary receives additional help on medical costs. He is provided transportation for his work. When his children are ready for college, Southern Baptists have a resource called the Margaret Fund to help.

He receives transportation to the field and an outfit allowance. When he goes back to the field after a furlough, he receives a refit allowance.

After a missionary serves 10 years, he receives an increment of $300, and for each five-year period after that an additional $150. This means if a couple serves 25 years, they receive an increment to their support of $1,500 annually.

A couple's retirement is $4,500 a year and the head of a family receives a $20,000 life insurance benefit.

Of course, where the cost of living is high, a missionary with a large family may receive local currency pegged as high as $13,000 or $14,000 a year. In addition, he is provided housing.

But the money has to be translated into terms of U.S. purchasing power to be understood. For this reason dollar devaluation has severely hurt the individual missionary family. Anyone who has lived in Alaska can understand the difference between a $10,000 salary in Alaska and a $10,000 salary in Georgia. The same is even more true for the Ivory Coast or Japan.

Recognizing this, the Foreign Mission Board effected several measures for all fields during 1972. Additional strengthening awaits added resources through the Cooperative Program and Lottie Moon Christmas Offering.

The big question then: Is this missionary support enough? It's certainly not sufficient to motivate people to go. More than one missionary has said, "You can't pay me enough to move my family to another country and to accept the risks that are a part of leaving family and friends and my own environment." But the same missionary says, "Christ constraineth me."

In summary, missionary support is just that. Support. It is not a salary. It is not meant to compete with salaries paid at home either in local churches or in Baptist institutions.

It is meant to enable a person to move his family, to provide for it, to do the work God has called him to do, and to meet financial responsibilities as his children grow up. If a man's financial goals are beyond that, overseas missions is not for him. ■

Six Months – the half-way mark

Churches' Giving Report

The half-year mission giving record of the churches and associations is real interesting. It gives us a chance to see how we are doing as compared to last year, how nearly we are meeting our budget goal, whether we are increasing or decreasing in Cooperative Program gifts which is the life blood of our great denomination's mission program, both at home and abroad.

The first half of our fiscal year, September through February, saw the churches give through our office $2,110,824.19 against $1,983,055.63 at the same time last year. This is an increase of $127,768.56 or 6.4% above the giving rate of the same period last year but $39,175.79 under the budget goal to date. This is closer to our goal than we stood a year ago but it reminds us that our larger current budget can only be met by our gaining still more ground during the next six months.

Money has tightened up a little on the economic scene but God's people in this great land have been tremendously blessed materially.

"... For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required ..." (Luke 12:48b). I am persuaded that I address myself to people unto whom much has been given. May we respond in like measure and top the current goal by year's end as was the case last year.

Johnny Cash Premieres Film On Christ For Baptist School

Country and western superstar Johnny Cash premiered his new movie, "The Gospel Road," on the life of Christ before a packed theater in Charlotte, North Carolina, donating proceeds of the premiere to a North Carolina Baptist school that earlier had given him an honorary doctorate degree.

About $7,000 received through the film premiere was given to Gardner-Webb College in Boiling Springs, North Carolina, which awarded Cash the doctor of humanities degree in September of 1971 because of Cash's humanitarian work with prison inmates.

"Why? Because they did so much for me it made me feel at home," Cash responded when asked his motivations for giving proceeds to Gardner-Webb.

Cash, dressed in his traditional black, called the premiere of the film "the highlight of my life," adding it was a "real thrill to me" to see the marquee saying "Gospel Road."

"It was an even bigger thrill when I saw that big 'G' rating," Cash added. "I just hope that this will be the first of many films which are fit for our children as well as ourselves."

The movie, shot in Israel, is a documentary on the life of Christ as told, both in music and narration, by Cash, who financed the picture himself.

Concerning the film, the noted singer had this to say: "There comes a time in a man's life when he feels it's time to do something for the world, and for me this film is it. It is the story of Christ.

"We think this is one of the few serious offerings on the screen today that can be seen by all members of the family, and we are proud of it," Cash said.

Mission Gifts Continue Climb

Contributions to world missions through the Southern Baptist Convention's Cooperative Program unified budget continued to climb, with a 16.75 percent increase during the month of February.

During the first five months of the fiscal year, October through February, gifts through the Cooperative Program had reached $14,153,106, an increase for the year of almost $1.2 million, or 9.24 percent.

A six percent increase is necessary to meet the convention's budget for the year, SBC officials said.

In addition to the $14.1 million in Cooperative Program gifts, a correspondingly big increase in designated giving to specific mission causes was noted in the report prepared by the SBC Executive Committee.

A total of $15,135,157 has been given to designated mission causes, primarily home and foreign missions, so far during the fiscal year. It is an increase of $1.7 million or 12.83 percent for the year.

In February, Cooperative Program gifts were just short of the $3 million mark, with $2.9 million given through the denomination's unified budget. Designations were also up, with $9 million reported for specific mission causes, most of it through the Lottie Moon Christmas Offering for Foreign Missions. February, always a heavy month for designated gifts, noted a $1.4 million or 19.07 percent increase.

The financial report reflects only contributions to world and nationwide SBC mission causes and does not include amounts given to support local and state missions. (BP)

Americans United Denounce Sectarian Medical Codes

Americans United for Separation of Church and State has declared that the whole question of sectarian medical codes in hospitals receiving public funds needs to be reexamined in the light of recent federal district court decisions in Montana.

The Montana decisions required two Roman Catholic hospitals — St. Vincent's in Billings and Holy Rosary in Miles City — to perform sterilization operations which had been deemed necessary to protect the life and health of female patients. The decisions were based on the fact that the hospitals not only were supported by public funds, but performed "a basically public function" since there were no viable alternative hospital services in the neighboring community. The hospitals in question provided the only maternal and obstetrical services in the geographic area. The Court held that provisions of a sectarian hospital code could not be invoked to deny needed therapy to these patients.

Americans United executive director Glenn L. Archer declared: "Sectarian medical codes may be appropriate to sectarian hospitals, but they are an affront to civil and religious liberty when applied to hospitals which serve the entire community and are supported in any degree by public funds." Archer continued, "The hospital which receives public funds has a direct and obvious obligation to provide the full range of medical services to the community, without regard to sectarian prohibitions."

LIFE AND WORK SERIES

In Fellowship At The Lord's Table

I Corinthians 11:18-29

In the church at Corinth a love feast was held prior to the observance of the Lord's Supper. Unfortunately there were grave disorders in connection with its observance which resulted in the expressed disapproval of Paul. Some gluttonous persons actually became intoxicated and then attempted to observe the Lord's Supper in that condition. Regretting their sinful and disgusting conduct, Paul gave some explicit instructions as to the proper observance of the Lord's Supper, based on the revelation and instruction which he received from his Lord.

Christ instituted the Lord's Supper in the Upper Room at Jerusalem on the night of His betrayal. He did this in express recognition and for the everlasting remembrance of His death of agony, torture, and ignominy. The Lord's Supper is an ordinance which is to be observed by and in His churches at stated intervals as determined by each church, inasmuch as the Scriptures do not specify how often it is to be observed. There should not be any question in the mind of any Christian as to the importance or the purpose of this ordinance, for Christ said, "This do in remembrance of me."

Christ took the bread, which represented His own body, and gave thanks unto the Father for a body that could die for the sins of men. He also took the wine, which represented His blood, gave thanks for it, and interpreted the meaning of this symbol to the disciples. Then He gave the wine to them and commanded them to drink it. Of course, the bread which He gave to them was not His literal body, because He was yet present with them; and the wine was not His literal blood, because that blood still flowed in His veins.

Concerning the observance of this ordinance, Paul emphasized three things:

1. It is a practice. "For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come." The regular, prayerful, and scriptural observance of the Lord's Supper will enrich the lives of believers, cause them to love Christ more, and bring them to a more loyal and faithful devotion to their Lord and His church.

2. It is a proclamation. "Ye do shew the Lord's death." The silent bread and voiceless wine tell those who watch that Christ died and that sinners receive eternal life through His broken body and poured-out blood. His death is what is held up to view in this supper. His death for us should give gratitude to our hearts, purity to our thoughts, quality to our words, and tone to our actions.

3. It is a prophecy. "Ye do shew the Lord's death till he come." The Lord's Supper is truly a prophecy of a future event — Christ's return. The memory of His death should quicken the hope of His return. Every time we observe the Lord's Supper we proclaim to the world that Christ is coming again according to His own promise.

God's Word is very explicit concerning the attitudes, motives, and lives of those Christians who partake of the Lord's Supper. One matter of considerable concern to many is that of eating and drinking "unworthily." This verse does not say, or even imply, that we must be worthy to partake of the Lord's Supper. If so, no one would ever observe it, for none are worthy. "Unworthily" is an adverb which is used here only in the New Testament. Since it is an adverb and not an adjective, it refers to the manner of observing the Supper rather than to human character and conduct. So, the reference to eating and drinking unworthily does not apply to the unworthiness of the person observing the ordinance, but to the wrong manner in which it is done. For example, anyone who attempts to substitute human fellowship for the scriptural observance of the Lord's Supper observes it in an unworthy manner. His Supper must ever be observed in remembrance of Him and not as a feast of friends. Whoever partakes of the Supper in order to show his fellowship with any human being certainly perverts the ordinance and fails to observe it in a worthy manner. ■

INTERNATIONAL SERIES

God Cares

God is merciful
Psalm 103:8-11

These verses mark the transition in thought from God's countless blessings to His gracious and merciful nature. Mercy is the desire to spare and to save the wretched and the undeserving. This attribute of God has to do with His love in its relation to both the obedient and the disobedient. Reflection on our lives in the past makes us increasingly grateful that we are in the hands of One whose mercy and love are so abundant.

God's mercy is infinite. Of course, He is grieved by our evil thoughts and actions. He exhorts those who sin to repent, but He does not continue to rebuke those who repent of their sins and receive forgiveness from Him. He is far more interested in extending mercy than He is in pronouncing judgment. God does not hold any grudge against those who have sinned against Him and genuinely repented. His mercy is plenteous.

God is forgiving
Psalm 103:12-14

God's care extends to the forgiveness and removal of our sins. There is no greater joy than that which comes with the awareness that our sins have been forgiven. It is a wonderful experience to be released from the penalty, pollution, and power of sin. It is only through the mercy and grace of God that our transgressions are forgiven and our sins removed. As surely as the "east" and the "west," or the place of the sunrise and of the sunset, can never meet, so our sins are so removed from us that we shall never again be held responsible for them, as we were before they were so graciously forgiven.

God's relationship to us who are Christians is that of our Father. Even when we fail to do what He has commanded, because of His love for us, he has a father's heart of compassion and pity toward us. While He loved us prior to our being saved, He has a special love and compassion for us since we have become His children. Knowing all of our frailties, He continues to exercise pity toward us.

God pities us on account of our weaknesses, mistakes, and sins. His pity is enduring, as many of us know from experience, for He has borne mercifully with each of us for a long time. God is faithful in spite of the unfaithfulness of His children.

God is loving
John 3:16-17

As far as language can express it, the height, depth, length, and breadth of the love of God are here unfolded. God's love is here announced in such wonderful simplicity, and yet with such unfathomable grace, that it seems to be presumptuous to attempt to explain this passage. No words are needed to enhance the wonder of the glory of His love, which is universal, unchanging, unending, and unfailing. His love is infinite, inexpressible, incomprehensible, immeasurable, inexhaustible, and illimitable.

God expressed His love in the matchless and the most gracious gift that was ever made — His only begotten Son. The purpose of this gift was "that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." God's love was the source from which ample provision was made for our greatest need, which is the salvation of our souls. Salvation originated in God's love and was wrought out by His Son. His love has been manifested to the end that all who will may have eternal life. Man did not merit such love, but it was lavishly extended to him anyway. No man-made dimensions can determine how much God really cares for His creatures.

Christ was sent into the world, not for condemnation, but for the salvation of those who were condemned already. In salvation there is deliverance from sin — its guilt, condemnation, pollution, power and effects. People are not saved by their own deeds, but by Christ Jesus (Ephesians 2:8-10). Salvation is never an achievement of man, but always a gift from God.

God loved men enough to give His Son to die to save them. His love has rescued multitudes from despair, brought hope into their hearts, and influenced them to put their trust in Christ and to depend on Him alone for salvation. The acceptance of Christ guarantees the reception of eternal life. ■

Baptists Help Produce New TV Series, Two Network Shows

The Southern Baptist Radio and Television Commission announced plans for a new television series designed to show spiritual dimensions of Christian athletes, plus two network telecasts on the faith of a Baptist astronaut and an 80-year-old woman who suffered persecution in Nazi concentration camps.

Filming is to begin in March on the new television series, "The Athletes," produced by the Radio-TV Commission in cooperation with the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

On March 18, the National Broadcasting Co. (NBC-TV) will broadcast an hour-long conversation between Apollo 15 astronaut James B. Irwin, Harvard University professor of archaeology G. Ernest Wright, and NBC London correspondent Jack Paxton. The program will be carried from 2:00 to 3:00 p.m. EST, Sunday, March 18.

The following Sunday, March 25, the American Broadcasting Co. (ABC-TV) will present "A Tramp for the Lord" featuring the life story of Miss Corrie ten Boom, in conversation with ABC newsman George Watson. The program will be carried on the ABC "Directions" series from 1:00 to 1:30 p.m., EST.

Both the network programs were produced by the networks in cooperation with the SBC Radio-TV Commission.

Chicago Cubs infielder Don Kessinger will be the first professional athlete to be featured in "The Athletes," a series of 13 films to be produced yearly in cooperation with the Fellowship of Christian Athletes. The series will be filmed, in color, in 15 minute segments, for release early in 1974.

Other athletes who have agreed to participate in the series include Brooks Robinson of the Baltimore Orioles; Olympic skater Janet Lynn of Rockford, Illinois; Winston Hill of the New York Jets; and Tim Foley of the Miami Dolphins.

Stevens said the series would be particularly useful to television stations for use just before a televised game, during half-time, or immediately following major sports events.

Some of the other athletes scheduled for filming in the first 13 segments include Mel Kenyon, the auto racer who lost a hand in a driving accident but continues to compete; Jeff Mullins of San Francisco's Golden State Warriors basketball team; Paul Anderson, Olympic gold medalist, often called the world's strongest man; Jake Gaither, head coach for the Florida A&M football team; John Wooden, head coach for UCLA's basketball team; and Brian Sternberg who held the world's record for the pole vault before he was paralyzed in a trampoline mishap.

Faith In God Sustained Him, Ex-POW Tells Congregation

A Navy prisoner of war elected by his fellow prisoners as their chaplain returned to First Southern Baptist Church of Clairemont in San Diego, California, after being released to thank those who prayed for his freedom.

"I was able to sustain life and hope through the faith I have in God," Captain Howard Rutledge told the packed congregation of more than 700 persons.

"I am here today also because of the prayers of Christian people while I was in prison," he added.

He urged everyone to place their trust in God because, he said, there is no other place to put it.

For almost five minutes, the congregation applauded the former POW's remarks as he stood beside pastor Charles W. Foley, who had asked Rutledge to speak to the church.

At the close of the service, Rutledge came forward to move his membership to the church. Foley reported that five other persons in the congregation, moved by the captain's testimony, made professions of faith in Christ.

While imprisoned, Rutledge said he made a promise to God that on the first Sunday that he was in San Diego, he would join First Southern Baptist Church of Clairemont. He said he was converted as a boy of 14 in Oklahoma, but had never moved his membership to the church his family attends in California.

The last time he attended services at the church was just prior to going overseas when his son, John, was baptized. He said he lamented the fact that he did not move his membership at that time.

Rutledge, 44, had been imprisoned for almost 7½ years. Although he did not refer specifically to his experiences in prison in his brief testimony to the Clairemont church, a Navy spokesman said that his fellow POW's had selected Rutledge as their prison chaplain.

At the church service, Rutledge wore his khaki uniform, and sat with his mother, his wife, his two teenage daughters, his married daughter and his grandson. His family belongs to the church, according to Foley.

Almost all the returning American POW's are testifying, like Rutledge, to the power of prayer and faith in the prison camps, according to an American Baptist Navy chaplain stationed in the Philippines where most of the POW's first land.

"The key to their survival and to their mental and emotional health was a deep, abiding and growing relationship with God," said chaplain Alex B. Aronis, an American Baptist involved in a ministry to returning POW's at Subic Bay Naval Air Station, the Philippines.

"The story of the religious experiences of these men is inspiring beyond words," Aronis wrote in a letter to the director of American Baptist Chaplaincy Service in Valley Forge, Pennsylvania.

"Without God, I would not have been able to survive," one returning POW told Aronis. Asked if he meant that God really helped him, the ex-POW replied: "No, not merely helped. I mean it when I say I could not have made it without God pulling me through."

Another news report, carried by Christianity Today magazine, indicated there was apparently a spiritual movement that swept through the ranks of the POW's at the so-called "Hanoi Hilton" prison camp.

"Everything else was stripped from us, and we were left with only our faith in God," one POW was quoted as saying. "I couldn't have made it if it were not for Jesus Christ and being able to look up and see him in some of the trying times," another said.

Many of the POW's told of holding worship services, organizing choirs, and studying the Scriptures, mostly from memory, in the POW camps. The men reconstructed whole sections of Scriptures out of their memory, due to unavailability of Bibles.

The most meaningful passages to the POWs, Aronis wrote, included the 23rd Psalm, the Beatitudes from the Sermon on the Mount, Romans 12, and I Corinthians 13.

Their favorite hymns had been, "In the Garden," "What A Friend We Have in Jesus," and "Holy, Holy, Holy," he noted in a report carried by American Baptist News Service.

Their by-word, Aronis said, was "God Bless You," a greeting used even to those who professed to be agnostics or atheists.

"The religious experience was so significant and so beneficial for some," the chaplain wrote, "that two that I know of said they were glad they had the prison experience because of what they learned in terms of life, values and priorities."

One POW told the chaplain he uniquely felt God's presence. "The moment my feet touched down on North Vietnamese soil, God was standing next to me," the POW told him. "He was three buildings tall, and the tip of his shoes came to my forehead, and he said to me, 'I'm going to be with you and I'm going to take care of you'."

Chaplain Aronis added that in his conversations with the returning POW's, "the stories just kept coming, not because I was pumping but because they just had to be told. It was the spontaneous sharing of Good News that is apparent in the New Testament." (BP)
