Preface

The ability to have ready information is important in a fast-paced world. That is no less true in a fast-paced church life. The level of activity changes with every new year of church growth among Southern Baptists. This level of activity calls for a handy reference that can help keep leaders current on information related to the denomination. The new Southern Baptist Handbook provides such information to every church and denominational minister/leader.

The Handbook has been with us since 1921 when E. P. Alldredge, secretary of the Department of Statistics and Survey, Baptist Sunday School Board, served as the first editor. His insights and focus made the Handbook an excellent resource. But the Handbook never achieved its desired audience. In 1941 The Quarterly Review magazine was established; and with that new periodical, the Handbook took on new life. The Handbook became a part of The Quarterly Review magazine in 1941-42. This union was short-lived, and the two periodicals were separate for the next 15 years.

In 1958 J. P. Edmunds brought the two together again. That union lasted until October 1990. In 1972 The Quarterly Review magazine and the Handbook became part of the Church Administration Department of the Baptist Sunday School Board. Though edited in the Church Administration Department, the Research and Statistics Department (now the Corporate Planning and Research Department) of the Baptist Sunday School Board under Martin Bradley's leadership continued to give strong support to The Quarterly Review magazine and in particular the handbook issue. That support will not change with the new Southern Baptist Handbook.

Let's look at the new Handbook. "What's in it for me?" is a question often asked in today's society. If people feel a product or event has something special for them, they want it. Well, look no further; the handbook has statistics, data, graphs, and interpretive articles in 12 vital areas:

- Southern Baptist Trends and Highlights
- Church Growth
- Summary of Major Items
- Southern Baptist Receipts and Expenditures
- Church Program Enrollments
- Foreign Mission Board
- Home Mission Board
- Bold Mission Thrust
- Southern Baptist Institutions
- Statistical Report (article)
- Southern Baptist Directories
- The World of Religion

This information is compiled from the Uniform Church Letters and over 200 other sources. The Handbook explores the life of 40,000 churches and missions and puts that information at your fingertips.

How does it look? Give it the once over and see. The new Handbook has a larger page size, additional pages (from 96 to 144), and full-color cover and graphics. As the cover illustrates, the Handbook is a photograph of Southern Baptist life—behind the numbers are Southern Baptists. Each issue tells the changing story of our Southern Baptist Convention, churches, missions, and opportunities to win people to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ.

I hope you will enjoy and appreciate the many new features in the Handbook. I usually wear out two copies—one at home and one at the office. I want you to let us know how you like the new Southern Baptist Handbook. Please write us.

I am indebted to the editorial team in the Church Administration Department—John Chandler, manager and Linda Barr, editor; to Martin Bradley and Cliff Tharp and their staff; and to all those who work so hard to give us the Southern Baptist Handbook.

Total Church Membership

The 1990 church membership figure of 15,044,413 represents an increase of 130,875 members over the 1989 total. This increase is the largest since 1986 and is significantly higher than the increases for the past several years. It is lower than the average yearly increase for the 1980s which was 153,447. While the 1990 net increase is encouraging, the membership trend shows that, although membership is increasing, the increase is at a decreasing rate. This decreasing rate is significant because church membership could ultimately reach no growth or even decrease by the end of this decade unless the trend reverses itself.

Resident Membership

In recent years the resident membership trend has been a matter of concern. In the last half of the eighties the net change declined significantly. The average yearly increase in the first half of the eighties was approximately 129,000; however, the last half was only 40,388. The 1990 net increase of 110,849 was thus a marked improvement over recent years. What is not known at this point is how this was accomplished. Baptisms were a factor since they were almost 34,000 higher than 1989; however, this leaves approximately 77,000 more to account for. Additions increased approximately 14,000, but what portion of these persons were already in a resident status when they moved their letter or what portion moved out of nonresident status is not known. Apparently a sizable number of persons moved back into resident status without moving their letter, and/or fewer persons than usual moved from resident to nonresident status.

Baptisms

Baptisms have increased for the past three years with the 1990 increase (33,924 or 9.7%), the highest since 1980. The 1990 total was 385,031 baptisms. While a significant increase from the 1989 figure, the 1990 total is well below the peak number of baptisms (445,725) which occurred in 1972. The 1950-90 trend line shows baptisms moving downward from approximately 390,000 in 1950 to approximately 375,000 in 1990. Volatility around the trend line shows several near highs and lows over this 40-year period with a range of 445,725 to 336,050. Surprisingly, the high and low are only six years apart.

Number of Churches

A net increase of 189 churches in 1990 brought the number of churches in the SBC to a high of 37,974, only 26 churches short of 38,000. This makes the 60th straight year of increase. By decade, the fifties lead as the decade in SBC history with the greatest growth in number of churches. A downtrend following the fifties reached a low point in 1970 with a net gain of only 25 churches that year. Since 1970 an uptrend has taken place, and the net change in number of churches in the eighties exceeded that for the seventies by 910 churches. Present net growth in churches is the result of approximately 400-450 new and reorganized churches and 200-250 drops each year.

Church Location and Size of Church

Forty years ago the SBC was predominantly a Convention of small churches of under 300 members located in rural/small community areas of less than 2,500 population. Rural and smaller-sized churches characterized approximately three fourths of all churches. This type of church now accounts for 43 percent of all SBC churches.

An increase in the population of many communities, churches growing in membership, fewer new churches, and new churches which are more likely to be started in areas with more than 25,000 population have all contributed to the change.

Almost as many SBC churches can be found in rural areas as were found four decades ago. The number is now 22,548 as compared with 22,877 in 1949. The fact that the percentage of these open-country, village, and town churches has dropped from 83.8 percent in our Convention to 59.4 percent does not take away from the impact these churches can still have on the denomination.

As many of our churches have grown in size of membership over the past four decades (thus moving out of the under-300 category), the number of new churches has not been sufficient to keep the percentage of small churches in the SBC at the same level (decline from 79.6% in 1949 to 60.1% in 1990). However, the number of churches with under 300 members is close to what it was in 1949 (22,335 in 1990; 21,718 in 1949).

Total Receipts

The 1990 total receipts figure of $4,866,119,560 represented an increase over 1989 of 6.1 percent, the highest annual gain since 1984. The table shows how the annual percent change in total receipts compares favorably with the annual percent change in the Consumer Price Index (CPI). Used as one indicator of inflation, this index is a measure of the average change in prices over time of basic consumer goods and services.

Annual Percent Change
Year	Total Receipts	CPI
1980	11.8	13.5
1981	12.0	10.3
1982	12.0	6.2
1983	8.1	3.2
1984	8.8	4.3
1985	6.0	3.6
1986	6.0	1.9
1987	4.3	3.6
1988	2.4	4.1
1989	4.4	4.8
1990	6.1	5.4

Mission Expenditures

Mission expenditures only showed an 0.8 percent increase in 1990 over the previous year as compared with 3.4 percent in 1989 and 3.0 percent in 1988. However, a change in the mission reporting instructions on the Uniform Church Letter likely was a major factor in this unusually low increase. The percent increase would likely have been similar to the 1988 and 1989 figures without this change.

As a percentage of total church expenditures, mission expenditures have remained at approximately 15.5 percent over the 1970-90 period. Within the items that make up mission expenditures, the percent distribution has changed. At least one category (all other mission causes) has significantly increased its portion with Cooperative Program the lone significant decrease.

Church Debt

Church debt as a percent of total gifts decreased from 116.7 percent in 1967 to 45.2 percent in 1990. This decrease was a gradual one up to the middle eighties. Since that time the percent has remained in the 43 to 45 percent range.

Cooperative Program

Cooperative Program giving continues to decline as a percent of total gifts. The decline is not a recent one but has been going on for several decades. In 1960 the percent was 10.1; in 1970, 9.4; in 1980, 9.0; and the 1990 percent was 8.0.

Pastor Tenures

Over the period 1972-90 a steady uptrend in the length of pastor tenure occurred. The mean (or average) has increased from 48.3 months to 64.6 months, an increase in tenure of 1 1/3 years. The median tenure (the middle value when half the cases are above and half are below) has increased 11 months (from 29.3 months to 40.2 months). The difference between the mean and the median is due to the fact that the mean is affected by extremely long tenures.

Several possible explanations for the increase in tenure are:

- Pastors remain longer at larger churches, and the SBC continues to increase the proportion of large churches.
- The supply of pastors exceeds the demand.
- Pastors are more reluctant to leave because of financial reasons (own their own home, adequate salary, and so on).

Five Sources of Growth in the Southern Baptist Convention

C. Kirk Hadaway

What is the primary source of growth in the Southern Baptist Convention? This question has no easy answer because growth comes from many sources. Growth is not evenly distributed throughout the Convention; however, certain types of churches and churches in certain situations have contributed more to the growth of the Southern Baptist Convention than have other churches. Five sources of growth are considered in this article. Other sources of growth do exist, but these five merit attention.

Metropolitan Churches

Over half of SBC churches (57%) and 41 percent of our members can be found in nonmetropolitan areas. But these areas are not the primary source of SBC growth. Over the past five years (1985-1990) metropolitan churches grew by 4.9 percent for a net gain of 416,167 members. By contrast, nonmetropolitan churches grew by only 2.4 percent. This resulted in a net gain of 144,897.¹

On the average, metropolitan churches grew faster than did nonmetropolitan churches. Metropolitan churches also contributed disproportionately to the overall growth of the SBC; however, growth was not evenly spread among metropolitan areas. SBC membership in the largest metropolitan areas (megas) grew much faster than in smaller metropolitan areas. SBC membership in the 44 mega areas (those metropolitan areas with over a million persons, or those expected to reach one million by A.D. 2000) grew by 6.2 percent. (See p. 18.) Membership growth in smaller metropolitan areas was somewhat slower (3.9%). Clearly, metropolitan churches are a major source of SBC growth.

New and Newer Churches

New churches add to the growth of the SBC in at least two ways. First, the positive impact of the new unit affiliating with the SBC impacts growth. For example, if a church was organized in 1986 with 100 members and experienced no growth over the next four years, it still would have helped the denomination grow. If it had 100 members in 1990, the congregation contributed all of these 100 members to the growth of the SBC when growth is measured from 1985 to 1990. This effect is not trivial.

New churches "contributed slightly over one fourth (25.7%) of the members added to the Convention between 1981 and 1986."² Further research indicates that this effect continues. Marler and Hadaway demonstrated that the growth rate of the Convention is reduced markedly when new churches are removed.³

The second way that new churches help a denomination grow is by the fact that younger churches grow faster than older churches. Research into the impact of new churches among five denominations demonstrated that the newest churches in a denomination are more likely to experience membership growth than are the churches in any other age category. Conversely, the oldest churches in a denomination were the least likely to grow.⁴

Like the positive impact of adding new churches, the rapid growth rate among younger congregations also has a major effect. On the average, the oldest SBC churches grew only 4.1 percent between 1981 and 1986, in comparison to an average growth of 47.1 percent among the youngest SBC churches.⁵ Young churches add many new members to the growth of the Convention.

New churches and churches which affiliate with the Convention account for an estimated one fourth to one third of SBC growth during any five-year period. However, the long-term impact of younger churches on SBC growth suggests that not starting any new churches eventually would cut the SBC growth rate in half.⁶ The effect is cumulative.

Small Churches

The smallest SBC churches are more likely to grow than churches in any other size category. To examine this relationship, size was measured in 1985, and membership change was recorded from 1985 to 1990. This comparison demonstrated that 50.2 percent of churches with less than 50 members in 1985 grew more than 10 percent over the past five years. Churches with 50 to 99 members in 1985 were able to grow 38.8 percent. The percent of churches growing drops off steadily until reaching its lowest level among churches which had 750-999 members in 1985. Only 22.9 percent of these churches grew by more than 10 percent from 1985 to 1990.

Why are smaller churches more likely to grow than larger churches? First, small churches tend to be newer than larger churches, and young churches are more likely to grow than are older churches. The second factor is logistical. For example, a church of 50 members can add 20 members easier than a church of 500 can add 200. For the church of 50, new space likely will not be needed to accommodate the new members, but a gain of 200 members for the church of 500 may be many more than the present facilities can hold. The third factor relates to institutional momentum. Smaller churches are easier to reorient toward growth than are larger churches. A major survey which compared churches that had experienced "breakout growth" (rapid growth after years on the plateau) to churches which remained on the plateau found that smaller churches were more likely to experience breakout growth than were larger churches. The study concluded: "It is easier to reorient a small church toward growth than it is a larger church—much in the same way that it is easier to turn around a speed boat than an ocean liner. The inertia behind the plateau is greater for larger churches."

However, the impact of small churches on the growth of the denomination is not particularly dramatic. Even though churches with under 100 members are more likely to grow than churches in any other size category, the fact that such churches are so small reduces their effect on the denomination's "bottom line."

Large Churches

Despite the fact that, logistically, smaller churches can grow easier, the largest churches in the SBC are also likely to experience growth. The percentage of growing churches is greatest among congregations with under 50 members. (See p. 19.) The proportion growing then declines steeply before slightly leveling out among churches with 200 to 1,999 members.⁸ However, among churches with 2,000 to 2,999 members and especially among churches with 3,000 or more members, the proportion growing increases greatly. The graph on page 19 reveals that 38.5 percent of churches with 3,000 or more members grew by more than 10 percent from 1985 to 1990. This is in comparison to 23.9 percent of churches with 1,000 to 1,499 members and 24.2 percent of churches which had 1,500 to 1,999 members in 1985.

Not only are the largest SBC churches likely to grow, few are declining. The proportion declining (with more than 10% decline) is lower than among any size category (only 11.4% are in decline). The largest SBC churches are either growing or plateaued.

Due to their size and to the fact that such a large proportion are growing, large SBC churches contribute more to the growth of the SBC than any other size category. The 125,000 plus members added to the Convention by churches with 2,000 members or more accounts for over 20 percent of SBC growth from 1985 to 1990.

Ethnic Churches and Black Churches

For many years Southern Baptist leaders have speculated about the number and percentage of SBC churches which are predominantly ethnic or black. Most observers also assumed that these ethnic and black churches were more likely to grow than was the typical Anglo congregation. Data from the 1990 Uniform Church Letter reveals that approximately 5.5 percent of SBC churches are predominantly ethnic or black (1,828 congregations).⁹ In this case "predominantly ethnic or black" means that the largest racial/ethnic group in the church is some group other than white (non-Hispanic).

Ethnic and black congregations are more likely to grow than are white congregations. White churches were the least likely to grow. (See p. 19.) Hispanic churches were the most likely to grow (46.1% grew by more than 10% from 1985 to 1990). Asian and Pacific Islander churches and black churches also had a high proportion of growing congregations. When added together, 44.3 percent of the ethnic or black churches grew, as compared to only 29.9 percent of the white churches.

Ethnic and black churches contributed disproportionately to the growth of the Southern Baptist Convention. These congregations increased in size by an aggregate 20 percent and contributed over 111,000 members to the overall growth of the SBC. Most of this growth was from existing ethnic and black congregations. However, almost 20 percent of the gain came from the addition of new ethnic or black congregations which were organized after 1985.¹⁰

Conclusion

Anyone reading this article should resist the temptation to calculate the exact percentage of SBC growth from each of the five sources and then to compare the impact of one source to another. The categories do overlap, so it is not possible to say that 74 percent of SBC growth comes from metropolitan churches and another 32 percent from new churches. Most of the new churches were started in metropolitan areas.

The point is that all five sources of growth are extremely important to the Southern Baptist Convention. Without a marked increase in the growth of metropolitan churches in 1990, the Convention would not have grown faster than in 1989. In fact, SBC growth rate would have dropped. Without the disproportionate growth of ethnic churches, black churches, small churches, young churches, and large churches, the Convention's growth would have been reduced further—likely to the point of actual decline.

The SBC continues to grow, but not rapidly. If further growth is to be assured, attention should be given to monitoring the growth of churches in each of these five areas.

⁸The percentage growing continues to drop, but it does not do so as sharply.

⁹This percentage refers to the percentage of ethnic or black congregations among those congregations that responded to the racial/ethnic question. A total of 33,420 Southern Baptist Convention congregations responded to the question.

¹⁰At least some of the 111,000-plus increase came from ethnic and black congregations that affiliated with the Convention between 1985 and 1990 but had dates of organization prior to 1986. At present no estimate has been made concerning the effect of these congregations on the growth of the Southern Baptist Convention.

In 1976 Southern Baptist churches, during their annual Convention, focused attention on the unreached and the harvestable. The result of this concern was Bold Mission Thrust which called for presenting the gospel to each unreached individual in the world by A.D. 2000. This goal was accomplished by other more tangible goals for Foreign Mission Board missionaries laboring among the unreached and the harvestable people of the world. With 10 years left in the BMT countdown, this update portrays the goals in context.

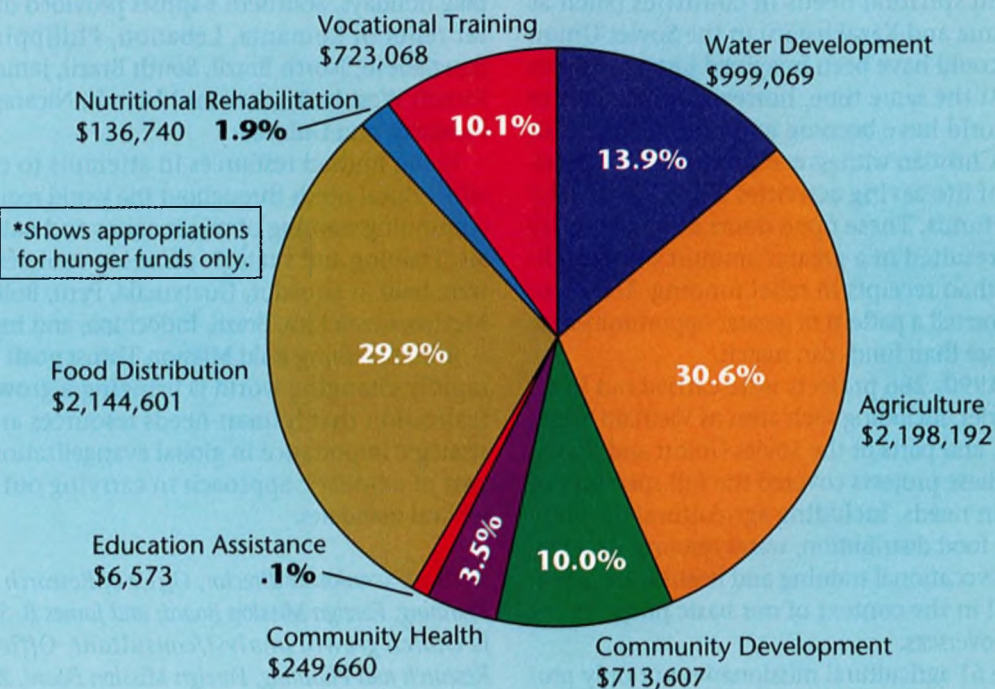

These statistics indicate work done by Baptist churches and conventions overseas where our missionaries relate as partners and helpers. Missionaries and volunteers come from Southern Baptist churches, with the Foreign Mission Board serving as the channel. Although the FMB doesn't control the items reported, intentions of Bold Mission Thrust are basic in the Board's plans and outreach.

A. Clark Scanlon and James B. Slack

As of January 1, 1991 the Foreign Mission Board had 3,859 missionaries under appointment in the 252 countries of the world. Of these 3,859 missionaries, 3,799 were residential missionaries living in 121 countries. In addition, the Foreign Mission Board had 60 nonresidential missionaries in 14 other countries who are targeting 40 different people groups with a population of 200 million. The Foreign Mission Board's residential and nonresidential missionaries target 73 percent of the world's population. As each nonresidential missionary is commissioned to carry the gospel and to see that churches are planted within a specific people group in a World-A-type country, the residential missionaries are sent to give primary attention to planting and harvesting by means of evangelism that results in churches.

Incredible events of this past year have helped shape a new emphasis and a new importance to a holistic approach to evangelism. The crumbling of both physical and ideological walls has exposed greater need for and more openness to meeting people at the point of both their physical and spiritual needs in countries (such as Romania and Kazakhstan) in the Soviet Union than could have been imagined just a few years ago. At the same time, however, other areas of the world have become more restrictive to an overt Christian witness except through the provision of life-saving activities made possible by relief funds. These open doors of opportunity have resulted in a greater amount of expenditures than receipts in relief funding. They also may foretell a pattern of greater opportunities for response than funds can match.

In 1990, 286 projects were carried out in 62 countries, including such areas as Vietnam, Cambodia, and parts of the Soviet Union and Romania. These projects covered the full spectrum of human needs, including agricultural development, food distribution, water resource development, vocational training and health-care activities all in the context of our basic purposes for being overseas.

The 61 agricultural missionaries not only provided assistance in improved agricultural practices, family food raising, and improvement of livestock at the local level, they also provided an effective people-to-people witness. Expanding their witness, they provided international consultation to 15 other countries who have requested assistance. These abilities have opened otherwise closed doors and have made possible the opening of hundreds of new churches.

Street children and the poorest of the poor were ministered to in 151 community centers, touching 25,387 needy people in the ever-growing ghetto/slum areas of the exploding urban centers of the world.

Social, economic, and political turmoil is leading to literally millions of children being abandoned, living in the streets, and fending for themselves. These children exist without homes, health care, adequate food, or education. Boys and girls in 27 children's homes (which care for 1,691 of the most needy children) received food and a home environment in the context of Christian care.

Earthquakes, floods, and other disasters rarely take holidays. Southern Baptists provided disaster relief in Romania, Lebanon, Philippines, Bangladesh, North Brazil, South Brazil, Jamaica, French West Indies, Leeward Islands, Nicaragua, Paraguay, and Guinea.

Using limited resources in attempts to cope with critical needs throughout the world requires continuing training of missionaries and nationals. Training and strategic planning conferences were held in Ecuador, Guatemala, Peru, Bolivia, Mexico, Costa Rica, Brazil, Indochina, and India.

Accomplishing Bold Mission Thrust goals in a rapidly changing world is bringing a growing realization that human-needs resources are of strategic importance in global evangelization as part of a holistic approach in carrying out the biblical mandates.

A. Clark Scanlon is director, Office of Research and Planning, Foreign Mission Board; and James B. Slack is church growth analyst/consultant, Office of Research and Planning, Foreign Mission Board, Richmond, Virginia.

Annie Armstrong Easter Offering

The work of the Home Mission Board is carried out in part from funds received through the Annie Armstrong Easter Offering for Home Missions. From 1967 to 1990 Annie Armstrong Easter Offering for Home Missions receipts increased more than eightfold. Most of this increase is due to the effects of inflation. In terms of purchasing power, Annie Armstrong Easter Offering receipts have increased about 125 percent (an average increase over the past 23 years of 3.9 percent). This increase means that the purchasing power of the offering has more than doubled. The 1990 offering totaled $35,680,000 for an increase of 8.14 percent over 1989; but after adjusting for inflation, the increase was 2.7 percent.

Ratios of Population Per Southern Baptist Church and Per Resident Member

Looking at the ratio of population per Southern Baptist church and per resident member gives a clear picture of the opportunities awaiting Southern Baptists in the areas of evangelism, church starting, and church growth. In 1990 there was one Southern Baptist church for every 6,540 persons in the United States. The population-to-church ratio is not evenly distributed throughout the United States because of the concentration of Southern Baptist churches in the South where the population-to-church ratio is much lower. The population-to-church ratio ranges from a low 1,499 people for every Southern Baptist church in the East South Central states (Mississippi, Alabama, Tennessee, and Kentucky) to a high of 117,919 people for every Southern Baptist church in the New England states of New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania.

During the past decade, the total number of SBC churches and independently reporting missions in the continental United States rose from 35,829 to 38,028. This number represents a net gain of 2,199 churches. However, from 1980 to 1990 the population increased more than 22 million. Thus, the population-per-SBC-church ratio deteriorated from 6,323 to 6,540. If the 1980 ratio had been retained nationally, Southern Baptists would be meeting in 39,334 churches. This increase would have occurred if the South Atlantic states (from Maryland to Florida) had maintained their 1980 ratio of 3,211 rather than increasing to 3,589.

In 1990 there were 23.5 people for every Southern Baptist resident member in the nation. This ratio, however, is not evenly distributed throughout the nation. The ratio ranges from a low of five people for every Southern Baptist resident member in Alabama to a high of 1,406 people for every resident member in Minnesota. Generally, the highest ratios tend to be in the Northeast Division of the United States.

During the 1980s, as Southern Baptists engaged in Bold Mission Thrust, the ratio improved significantly in the North. Elsewhere, the ratio remained the same or deteriorated. In New England the ratio improved from 1,861 in 1980 to 844 in 1990. In the Middle Atlantic states—New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania—the ratio improved from 1,289 to 932. And in the East North Central states from Ohio to Wisconsin, the ratio improved from 114 to 106.

The ratio worsened in the South Atlantic states from Maryland to Florida. The ratio in 1980 was one SBC resident member for each 10.9 persons in the population; in 1990 the ratio was one resident member for each 11.9 persons. If evangelistic outreach had kept up with the population growth, Southern Baptists would have 338,340 new resident members in the region.

Bold Mission Thrust Report

Ernest E. Mosley

This 1985-90 Bold Mission Thrust Report (Year 5) is an accounting of Bold Mission Thrust progress during the year 1989-90, the final year of the third planning period of Bold Mission Thrust and the 14th year since the Missions Challenge Committee made its report to the 1976 Southern Baptist Convention meeting in Norfolk, Virginia. This committee's report first introduced the objective of sharing the good news with every person by A.D. 2000. Bold Mission Thrust became the theme of the emphasis in 1979 at the meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention in Houston, Texas.

The first Bold Mission planning period was 1979-82. During this period the Convention emphasized three priority areas: The Church Going, The Church Growing, and The Church Giving. The second planning period was 1982-85. Reach People, Develop Believers, and Strengthen Families were the three priority areas. The three priority areas for 1985-90 were Reach People, Develop Believers, and Strengthen Missions.

Southern Baptist School Enrollments and Budgets

Arthur L. Walker, Jr.

The 1990 student enrollment figures show a slowing rate of growth for all Southern Baptist colleges and universities. The figures for the fall semester 1990 showed only a 1.4 percent increase over the preceding year. Prior to last year the growth in enrollment in recent years had been essentially 4 percent each year.

The enrollment figures include both full-time and part-time students in the college enrollments. For 1990, 110,605 students attended the Southern Baptist postsecondary institutions. Enrollments at these institutions have grown for the last nine years. The last enrollment decrease showed a drop of less than 1 percent over the previous year.

The statistics on student enrollments were released to the Education Commission by each of the institutions related to a Southern Baptist state convention. Of the 49 senior colleges, 34 had an increase in enrollment in the year of the report. Four of the six schools with the largest percent increase for 1990 enroll under one thousand students.

Only one of the current four junior colleges showed an increase in enrollment for 1990. Two of those which currently have junior-college status have plans for moving to senior-college status before the beginning of the next academic year.

The continuing change from junior-college to senior-college status reflects a movement which has been in effect for over 40 years. In the academic year of 1950-51, 22 junior colleges were identified with a state Baptist convention. Fifteen of these have since become Baptist senior colleges. Two junior colleges no longer exist. One has merged with a senior college in the state. Another has changed its name, and still another former junior college no longer has Baptist ties.

The changes in the senior colleges of 40 years ago have come more slowly. Of those institutions only two no longer acknowledge their connection with a state Baptist convention. One has merged with another senior institution in the state, and one has changed its name radically.

Several of the other four-year institutions have moved from college to university status.

Of equal importance in indicating the relationship with the Baptist state conventions is the amount of budget support received annually from the state convention with which the institution is related. Among the 53 junior and senior college level institutions, the average amount of the annual budget of each institution received through the state convention is 10.4 percent. The median amount received from the state convention is 9.05 percent of the total institutional budget.

At the same time, the budgets of these institutions continue to increase in substantial amounts. This means, of course, that the amount received from the supporting state conventions continues to be a smaller amount of the total institutional budget. Several state conventions have also found that the amount designated for education within the convention budget must be reduced as the overall amount received for state missions has not grown in the manner of previous years.

Among the academies related to the various state conventions, the average amount of the annual budget received from the state convention is 12.06 percent. The median amount received from the state convention by the academies, which are primarily secondary schools, is 9.6 percent of the institutional annual budget.

Among the six theological seminaries the funding is a different picture. The six theological seminaries all receive a significant part of their budget from the Southern Baptist Convention. The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary at 37.2 percent of its total budget receives the smallest proportion of its budget from funding by the Southern Baptist Convention. Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary at 66.7 percent of its budget receives the largest percentage of its total income from Convention support. The average amount of support for the six theological seminaries is 56.55 percent of the institutional budgets.

Seminary enrollments in recent years have continued to level out. Beginning in the late 1970s, seminary enrollments began to increase in significant numbers. All of the seminaries had rather high enrollment increases in almost every year in the early 1980s. In the later years of that decade, enrollments did not grow as rapidly. Only in recent years, however, have enrollments at the seminaries begun to reflect the significant downturn in the number of college students and in the smaller number of college graduates who seek to enter service professions.

A recent workshop sponsored by the Lilly Foundation reflected that virtually every Christian group has faced a lessening of the number of those who are interested in ministerial careers and/or service in local churches.

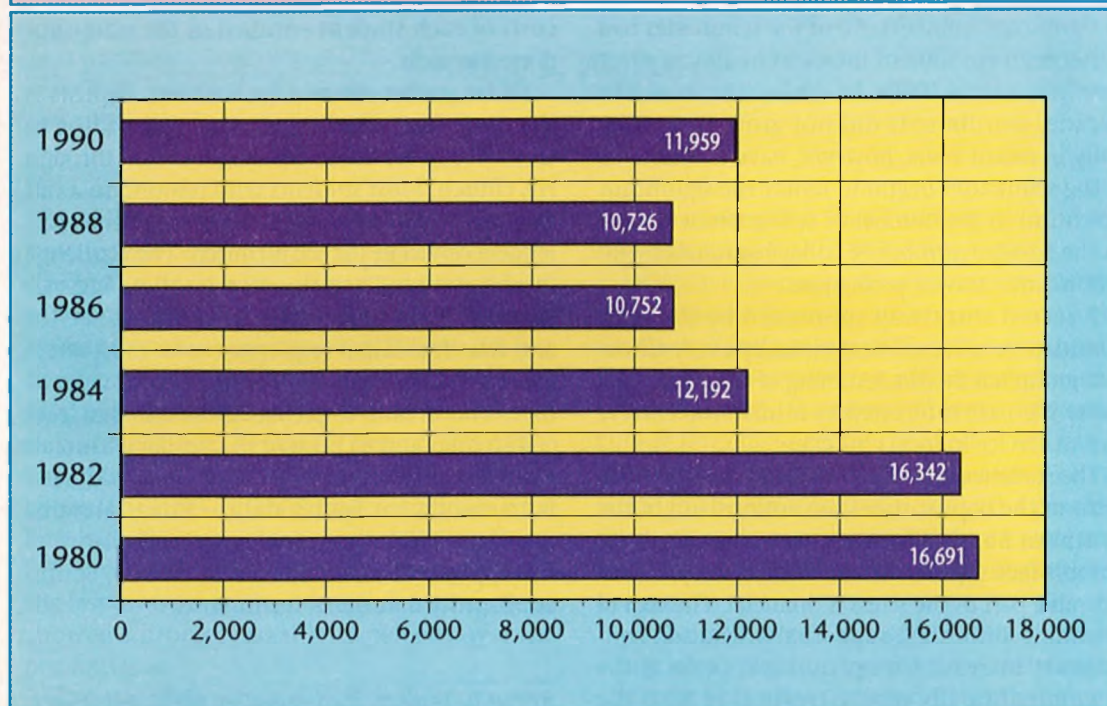

The statistics related to the educational institutions of the Baptist state conventions and of the Southern Baptist Convention reflect that the schools face significant stress. Obviously, a considerable part of the stress is financial. The cost of attending a nonstate-supported institution continues to increase. Comparison of tuition at the denominationally related institution with the state-supported institution must take into account the amount of financial support provided by state taxes. It is not financially responsible to fail to account for the significant amounts which are paid by all citizens for the educational costs of each student enrolled in the state-supported schools.

Of far greater concern for Southern Baptists is the decreasing numbers who are responding to God's call to service in His kingdom and through His church. Most students who respond to a call to ministry and missions do so through the challenge received in the local church. The challenge in education today is the need for those individuals who have been called to Christian service and who feel called to prepare to be most effective in that service. Southern Baptists created their schools both to prepare those called to leadership roles and to present the gospel within an educational context of a Christian worldview. Both enrollment figures and the financial statistics of the 1989-90 reports present a challenge of the opportunities and needs that exist in Southern Baptist educational institutions.

Introduction

The Southern Baptist Constituency Study is a rare and important opportunity to gather data from a national sample of Southern Baptist adults. Researchers have traditionally been able to survey church staff members and lay leaders (deacons, Sunday School teachers, and so forth) by obtaining a sample of such persons from available lists or through an initial survey of churches. Obtaining a sample representative of all church members, however, has proved to be exceedingly difficult because of problems in identifying and addressing less-active members (those who are not leaders and participate less frequently). This constituency study provides a means of overcoming these obstacles and of obtaining data from a representative sample of all nine million Southern Baptist adult church members.

The study, therefore, can offer significant help in answering the questions: Who are Southern Baptists? What do they believe? What products and services best meet their needs.

Methodology

The study was conducted in the summer and fall of 1990 by the Corporate Planning and Research Department of the Baptist Sunday School Board in conjunction with HTI Custom Research of Chicago, Illinois.

Phase 1 consisted of a survey of 40,000 households selected by HTI to be representative of the entire U.S. population by several criteria. In August 1990 the head of each household received a short questionnaire and was asked to provide some basic demographic information about each adult (18 years and older) in his or her household. Among those questions was one concerning church membership. For each adult who was a church member, the head of household was asked to indicate the religious group with which the church was affiliated.

Phase 2 consisted of a survey of 2,220 adults selected from those in Phase 1 identified as Southern Baptist church members. In October 1990 each of these persons received an eight-page questionnaire developed by the Corporate Planning and Research Department in consultation with numerous persons both inside and outside the Baptist Sunday School Board. In each phase those surveyed were told only that the study concerned "religion," and the identity of the Sunday School Board was masked throughout the questionnaire to prevent bias. Response to Phase 2 was closed one month after mailing, and data was then tabulated.

Response and Representativeness of the Findings

Of the 40,000 heads of households in Phase 1, 24,240 (60.6%) returned completed, usable questionnaires. The response included data from 43,703 individual adults in those households; 3,717 (8.5%) of those adults were identified as Southern Baptist church members.

In Phase 2, 2,110 of those 3,717 Southern Baptists were selected for the sample. A total of 1,799 (80.1%) returned completed questionnaires prior to the cutoff date; however, 402 indicated that they were not Southern Baptist church members in spite of having been identified as such in Phase 1. If those 402 are subtracted from the base of 2,220, the response rate for Southern Baptists in Phase 2 was at least 1,377 of 1,818 (75.7%).

Men were somewhat overrepresented in the Phase 2 findings; however, the data was weighted to reflect a gender breakdown of 43 percent men and 57 percent women (the breakdown identified in Phase 1).

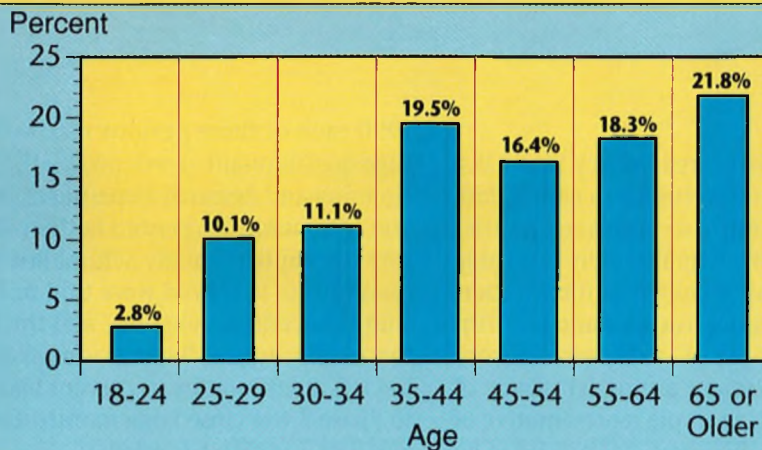

Findings

The following graphs present a few of the many important findings yielded by the study. These may be considered representative of all Southern Baptist adult church members.

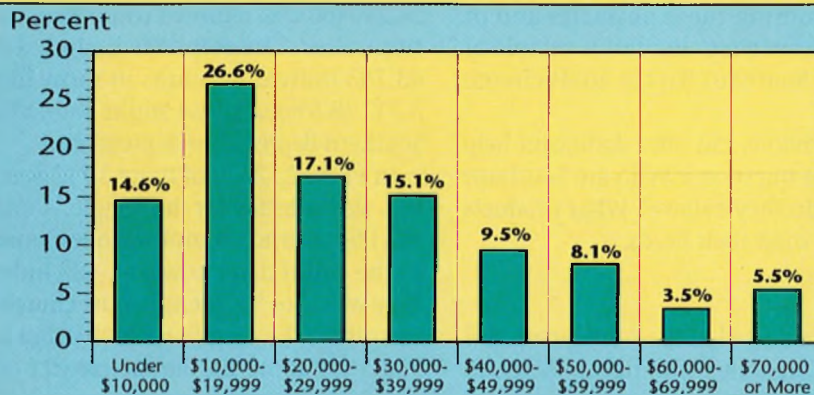

M. Dean Anderson is a research analyst, Corporate Planning and Research Department, Baptist Sunday School Board, Nashville, Tennessee.

Baptist Convention of New England—The Baptist Convention of New England includes the following states: Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, and

Vermont. The state convention offices are located in Northboro, Massachusetts. (See "Directory of State Conventions" on page 127.)

Breakout Growth—Breakout growth is a rapid growth (at least 15 percent increase in membership and Sunday School) over a three-year period after several years on a plateau.

Church-Type Missions—Church-type missions provide a ministry to people through worship services. Likely, the mission's ministry also will be carried out through one or more organizations (such as Sunday School, Discipleship Training, WMU, Brotherhood, etc.) patterned after those in established churches. The activities of a church-type mission may be held in homes, schools, mission buildings, or commercial buildings which can be owned by the mission's sponsor or rented.

Constituency—Constituency consists of the people involved in or served by an organization. SBC constituency is, therefore, all Southern Baptist church members.

Demographics—Demographics is the statistical characteristics of populations such as age and income.

Mean—Mean is the average score or value.

Median—Median is the middle score or value. Half fall above the median; half fall below it.

Mega Areas (Megs)—Mega areas are the 44 metropolitan areas that now have or are expected to have a million or more by A.D. 2000.

Membership Decline—Membership decline is based on membership losses of over 10 percent during a five-year period.

Membership Plateau—Membership plateau is based on a membership change of plus or minus 10 percent during a five-year period.

Metropolitan Areas—A metropolitan area is composed of a county or counties that include a city that, along with its surrounding densely settled territory, has at least 50,000 in population. Nonmetropolitan areas are all counties that are not defined as metropolitan.

Nonreporting Churches—Nonreporting churches are those that are still affiliated with the Southern Baptist Convention but which have not submitted a Uniform Church Letter in three or more years.

Northwest Baptist Convention—The Northwest Baptist Convention includes the states of Oregon and Washington. The state convention offices are located in Portland, Oregon. (See "Directory of State Conventions" on page 128.)

Other Additions—Other additions refer to the number of persons who joined Southern Baptist churches by ways other than baptism (that is, letter of transfer, statement of faith) during the current associational year.

Other-Type Missions—Other-type missions are all other types of local missions (such as preaching stations, mission Sunday Schools, extension Bible classes, home fellowship groups, jail ministries, and resort ministries).

Resident Members—Resident members are those persons who live close enough to their church to attend.

Total Gifts—Total gifts include undesignated gifts and designated gifts (money given by members and visitors for which the giver specifies where the money goes)—for example, a building fund or special missions offerings).

Total Members—Total members include resident and nonresident members (those who do not live close enough to attend but are still members of the church).

Total Mission Expenditures—Total mission expenditures include the money given by a church and its missions directly to the following causes:

1. church-type missions
2. other-type missions such as preaching points
3. Cooperative Program
4. associational missions program
5. state missions
6. home missions (includes Annie Armstrong Easter Offering and other designated gifts to home missions)
7. foreign missions (includes Lottie Moon Christmas Offering and other designated gifts to foreign missions)
8. Southern Baptist Christian education (colleges, seminaries, etc.)
9. Southern Baptist children's homes
10. Southern Baptist hospitals
11. Southern Baptist homes for the aged
12. all other money to missions given through state conventions, SBC, or any other place where the church wants money to go

Total Receipts—Total receipts consist of total gifts plus money received by the church from other sources such as rentals, day-care program fees, income from savings, pastoral aid, parking fees, etc.

Undesignated Gifts—Undesignated gifts include the total amount of money given by members and visitors and includes money received in envelopes or the collection plate. The church uses its budget to determine how to spend this money.

30 years and have never failed to find the information needed. The staff of every state convention should have a copy.—William G. Tanner, executive director of the Baptist General Convention of the State of Oklahoma, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

The Handbook has helped in planning and setting goals for ministry in our church. It is an excellent resource for all Southern Baptists to know their progress and to become aware of what we are attempting to do as a people of God.—Betty Walker, administrative assistant at First Baptist Church, Burlington, North Carolina, and president of the National Association of Southern Baptist Secretaries

The facts and figures have been a valuable documentation for me as I annually train my youth workers. The Handbook helps provide credibility to my presentation.—Scott Neighbors, associate pastor, youth/church activities at First Baptist Church, Pryor, Oklahoma

We in the Sunday School Division at the Sunday School Board use the information provided in the Southern Baptist Handbook extensively. We use it to verify our thinking about trends, for official news releases, and to find our place in history. Our effectiveness would be greatly diminished without the information found in the Handbook.—James V. Lackey, director of the Sunday School Growth and Administration Department, Sunday School Division, Baptist Sunday School Board, Nashville, Tennessee

I welcome the new Southern Baptist Handbook with its mountain of vital information about the SBC. As with the old Handbook, formerly part of The Quarterly Review, I will continue to study and use the new Handbook to gain accurate information about our denomination. The new features and expanded statistics will better equip me to function in my place of responsibility.—Harold C. Bennett, president and treasurer of the Southern Baptist Convention Executive Committee, Nashville, Tennessee

Every pastor needs this valuable resource for sermon illustrations to give accurate facts about progress in our Southern Baptist Convention.—James C. Barry, retired consultant for preaching and worship, Church Administration Department, Baptist Sunday School Board, Nashville, Tennessee
