In this issue, Convention Treasurer's annual report of receipts from the churches.

Happiness is not in our circumstances but in ourselves. It is not something we see, as a rainbow. Happiness is not the station we arrive at but the manner by which we arrive. It is the ability to be tough with ourselves but tender with others.—Rev. Oliver G. Wilson, Houston Times.

A man who puts aside his religion because he is going into society is like one taking off his shoes because he is about to walk on thorns. So said Richard Cecil, a wise man of the 18th century.—Vern's Views.

Prayer requires preparation. A wise counselor once said, "When you have only two minutes for prayer, spend one of them in preparation."—Division of Evangelism, quoted in Christian Observer.

George Muller is reported to have remarked that the most important part of prayer was the 15 minutes after he had said, "Amen."—Quoted in Moody Monthly.

One thing I know: the only ones among you who will be really happy are those who will have sought and found how to serve.—Dr. Albert Schweitzer, quoted in Highways of Happiness.

I was interested to hear a major executive point out that the criteria he uses for selecting employees run in this order: character, intelligence, experience. "A really bright executive picks up experience very quickly," he told me. "But the man we need and want most, in important places, is a man with character sufficient to resist many kinds of pressures when the going gets rough. We find, then, that character is the most important ingredient of all, particularly if the man is responsible for policy making. An executive can buy brains and can buy experience, but character is something he must supply himself."—Fortune.

... My Impressions At The Convention

• I have attended many sessions of Tennessee Baptist Convention during my years as a pastor of churches in West Tennessee. Most of these times were when the convention met in either West or Middle Tennessee. Zion Church, Big Hatchie Association, appointed my son-in-law, Richard L. Lusk, pastor, and me as delegates. We had already planned to go. Zion Church, quite unexpectedly and in my absence, made up a purse for helping in my expense. I want to express to this great church my gratitude for their thoughtful kindness to me. Being a retired pastor makes it possible to enjoy the convention in a way an active pastor could not. Possibly this was why I could concentrate on some features of the convention that would have been overlooked if I had gone with the responsibilities of a pastor. I wish to set down here some of the features that impressed me.

THE PLACE: A journey through Tennessee from west to east will give one a feeling of gratitude for being a native of a state blessed with such a variety of scenic beauty. Gatlinburg, a small city of big people, is situated in the Great Smokey Mountains. For sheer grandeur and incomparable beauty combined, one would search long for a successful rival in all the world of the glorious Smokies, or, the Blue Ridge Mountains if you are in Virginia or North Carolina. If one might hear Beverly Shea sing, "How Great Thou Art" atop Clingman's Dome, looking out on all sides at the tree-covered mountains like frozen mighty blue billows on a stilled vast ocean, he would not only appreciate the song and the singer more, but also come closer to a proper realization of the greatness of God. And, looking at all the riches of beauty and wonder, realizing that the Mighty One Who "inhabith eternity" holds the soul of earth's most insignificant person of more value than all the world, he will have a more adequate sense of the "Goodness of God" that "Leadeth . . . to repentance".

THE PEOPLE: Of Gatlinburg: The friendly hospitality of the people of Gatlinburg was noticeable. One got the feeling of being at home. Brother Maples is not only a great singer of gospel songs, possessed of one of the most musical solo voices I have ever heard; but he proved himself to be a gracious pastor-host as well, having the pleasing faculty of putting people at ease with his quaint humor and wholesome personality. He told us, in his welcome address, that, if anything could be done to make us feel more at home, or more comfortable, while in Gatlinburg, everything would be done that his wife could get him to do. It was my pleasure to be in the men's chorus on Thursday evening, and to be next to Bro. Maples in the bass section. I told him I was glad to be next to him because I was afraid I would get hopelessly lost in the bass of one of the numbers. He said, "Well, we'll both just get lost together, then." You just can't beat that for hospitality.

2. Of the Convention: As is always the case, they represented the leadership as well as the rank and file of Tennessee Baptists. There was as little of limelight-seeking as one could hope to see in a convention of well over fifteen hundred messengers. It was apparent that the convention was made up of leaders and delegates who had real convictions and were not afraid to voice, if necessary, those convictions. At the same time there was evidence that each session was pervaded by the spirit of willingness, even of prayer that the will of God be found and followed. Feeling ran high at times, which is typical of Baptists in general and of Tennessee Baptists in particular. However, feeling, for the most part, was geared to reason, restraint, and readiness to listen to the contrary party's argument.

THE PROCEEDINGS: Leaving to others the detailed reports of these proceedings, the writer wishes to give his own impressions regarding them.

1. The Theme of the Convention: "Till we all come . . . unto . . . the fulness of Christ", seemed to hold the attention and determination of all from first to last. Attention to matters of business, even those which, to some, seem unattractive, dry, and even boring, reveals much as to what extent Baptists are really growing up. Taking their cue from a fine Christian leadership, the whole personnel of the convention seemed to desire that fairness and forbearance should be the watchwords throughout. As long as we have this kind of leadership Tennessee Baptists can go forward with confident courage, knowing that "God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble". Thank God for the leadership among Tennessee Baptists!

2. The Spirit of the Convention: We should all be grateful, too, for the spirit of patience manifested by a minority in defeat. "Defeat", though, is not the right word. When Christians pray for the will of God to be done, vote without rancor according to their honest convictions, and then are out voted by an equally just and honest and prayerful opposition, and still remain sweet tempered; it is truly a sign that they are on the road to spiritual maturity in Christ to His honor and glory. Who, then, was defeated? Who really won the victory? In my humble opinion it was a victory for the Lord. After all, that is what really matters. (I voted with the minority.) Too much time might, in the opinion of some, have been given a seemingly minor matter; but a matter affecting the Kingdom of Christ is not minor, and must be given full consideration. We must remember that the Lord admonishes us to "Despise not the day of small things". The readiness to take time necessary to deal with "small" matters will largely determine our attitude toward the greater matters that confront us, and vice versa. Jesus said, "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much" . . . Matthew 16:10 R. K. Bennett, Brownsville, Tennessee, Route 6.

Baptists Speak Out Concerning President

Southern Baptists, at their state convention meetings, had much to say about the President of the United States, both present and future.

Three states reacted against President Eisenhower's plan to visit Pope John 23 during a global peace mission.

The potential religious issue in the 1960 Presidential campaign was discussed in the three states.

Church and state posed an issue, in various forms, in Virginia, Arizona, Alabama, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Georgia, North Carolina, and Louisiana.

Two conventions voted to change their official names, after following the course required in their constitutions.

Tennessee and North Carolina acted on reports of their special survey committees, accepting some recommendations and rejecting others.

Ohio, Alabama, and Indiana set future goals or created planning committees to chart their future course.

Christian education became a subject for action in South Carolina, Alabama, Tennessee, and Mississippi. Baptists in Virginia, Florida, and South Carolina talked of new state Baptist office buildings.

Virtually each of the 13 state Baptist organizations which met adopted record budgets.

The Christian life commission of Alabama Baptist State Convention termed Ike's visit to Pope John 23 at the Vatican "disturbung . . . from the viewpoint of religious equality and freedom . . .

"While our sympathies are for world peace, we cannot see this worthy goal furthered by favoritism to a church group seeking political power," it continued.

Only one messenger voted "No" to action taken by the Baptist General Association of Virginia opposing the Eisenhower-papal meeting.

In Arizona, Baptists also took a dim view of this visit.

Arizona and Alabama also spoke their piece about the religious issue which American voters may likely face when they go to the polls in 1960 to elect Eisenhower's successor. Oklahoma added its voice of concern.

The Baptist General Convention of Arizona resolved "without reservation" to oppose "the election of any man to the position of chief executive" whose religious affiliation might conflict with his allegiance to the United States.

The Baptist General Convention of Oklahoma took similar stand. Without naming a candidate or the "other power" to which he might give first allegiance, it was understood by messengers as bearing on the 1960 Presidential campaign.

Alabama convention was explicit. Its statement read:

"It is our thought that any Roman Catholic serving as President, as a matter of course, would be subject to varied types of strong pressures to give favoritism to the Roman Catholic Church regardless of his personal desire and public commitment."

Georgia Baptist Convention called on the State Department of the federal government to "use its good offices in Spain immediately in terminating the oppression of the pastor and members of the Second Baptist Church in Madrid, and other evangelical churches throughout Spain . . ."

The executive board of Louisiana Baptist Convention is expected to make a comprehensive study of a denomination's leasing a public hospital. Their lease of Homer (La.) Memorial Hospital, built by Homer citizens, comes up for renewal soon. In light of action by Texas Baptists on a similar question, messengers asked for a study by Louisiana Baptists also.

Religious liberty committees reported on "released time" public school religious education in Virginia and North Carolina. Virginia urged its co-operating churches to withdraw from such programs in the public schools while North Carolina felt such courses proper when taught in churches.

Tennessee Baptist Convention voted to reimburse a county board of education $16,000 donated this year to Harrison-Chilhowee Baptist Academy to pay expenses of public school pupils attending the academy. The county plans to provide its own school in 1962. Until then, apparently, Tennessee Baptists will absorb the cost of public school students.

The convention came within a whisker of eliminating the academy from its institutions. A seven-vote margin out of nearly 1000 ballots cast saved its life for at least another year.

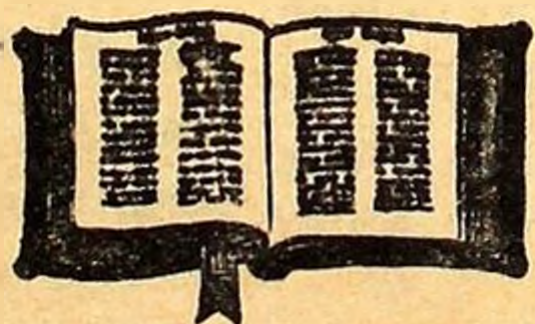

South Carolina Baptists rekindled the debate over whether fraternities belong on a Baptist college campus, and set the stage for a possible showdown in 1960. Their action would involve fraternities at Baptist-operated Furman University in Greenville, S. C.

Alabama Baptists moved another step toward establishing a Baptist college in the city of Mobile. They appointed a steering committee to continue with plans for it.

Mississippi Baptist Convention approved two of its colleges going into debt for dormitories.

The State Convention of the Baptist Denomination in South Carolina voted to change its official name to the less confusing South Carolina Baptist Convention. Maryland Baptist Union Association voted to become Baptist Convention of Maryland, but its change will not be binding for another year.

Break

By Ruby Lee Adams

In the moral teaching of Jesus Christ, we find that He did not teach the religion of humanity, but the humanity of religion.

In His first recorded sermon, delivered in the synagogue at Nazareth, Jesus thus described in a sentence his mission: 'The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the broken hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised. . . . And he began to say unto them, This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears.' In this discourse he discloses the secret of his power—a divine spirit endowing and directing him; he also discloses the object of his mission—the benefit of his fellow-men. From his Father he derives his inspiration; to humanity he renders his service.

The same fundamental truth underlies and pervades his next great sermon, the Sermon on the Mount. The theme of this sermon is human happiness and how to promote it.

The definition given for humanity by Frederic Harrison is food for thought: 'The conception of humanity can restore, as nothing else can, to the religious consciousness the variety and compass of which it has been robbed. It is no negative, lifeless, inhuman, unthinkable being. It is represented to us hour by hour in a thousand ways and by countless organs. Our parents, our wives, our children, our friends, are each some rudiment or expression of it; the comrades we work with are but an image of it; its voice speaks to us in every worthy book we read, in every beautiful work we see; every noble deed is the manifestation of it, every solemn act of life forms its sacraments, every honorable feeling and every loving word make its worship. The whole range of human life is transfigured by its glow; and all worthy men and women are its ministers for good.'

Observations

Spiritual Leadership Cannot Be Bought

There is not much danger of pastors being overpaid. Certainly there does not at the present time seem to be any pay schedule that would make the pastorate overcrowded with careerists. Dorothy Thompson, the noted journalist, has an article in the November Ladies' Home Journal which hits at the popular impression that the bigger the pay, the better the minister. Relating her story of her growing-up years as the daughter of a Methodist minister, Miss Thompson said that "If a $15,000 minimum salary were to be set for college educated ministers, pulpits would be crowded with young careerists calculating the ministry to be a better bet than most other professions." She leveled her criticism at a number of recent articles in church and lay publications which called attention to "the miserable salaries paid to Protestant ministers." She is not opposed to better salaries for ministers, but she wants to expose the heresies that may be found in relationship to salaries, one of them being that the standard of living and standard of life are much the same thing. Another is that there is no essential difference between medicine, teaching, social welfare, and the ministry. Miss Thompson rightly believes that the ministry is service for God by way of service to humanity that reaches through the soul.

We cannot have the right kind of spiritual leadership by advertising for it with big salaries. The true life of the ministry has always been one of sacrifice. The ministry is not just a profession. It is not merely a career. It is a calling of God, and only as such can it properly be filled. But when men have dedicated their lives in answer to the call of God for the sake of the gospel, the churches, as they call them into the pastorate, should meet their temporal needs. The laborer is worthy of his hire and in this time of rising prices and increased cost of living, the churches must not lag in giving adequate support to the ministry.

The Question Keeps Being Raised

The question of political and national loyalties keeps being raised since some of those being mentioned prominently as candidates for president and vice-president of the United States are adherents of the Roman Catholic faith. Under our form of government here in America, no religious qualification is made a test for public office. This is as it should be. But recently the board of bishops of the Evangelical United Brethren Church pointed out that "the issue which is being raised for us today goes beyond the question of a man's religious faith or adherence to an ecclesiastical system."

Certainly it is common knowledge that the Roman Catholic church is a political state with geographical territory, diplomatic relationships, and representatives on a governmental basis. This it is as well as a religious body. None of us as Americans can oppose any candidate on the basis of his religious adherence. But as Americans we can very well exercise our franchise and elect to the highest offices of our nation those about whom there will be no possible question as to their loyalty and devotion to the United States of America. With this in mind, the board of bishops of the Evangelical United Brethren Church in their recent pronouncement said, "It is common knowledge that this church (Roman Catholic) requires supreme allegiance to itself even in political matters." "Recently, in spite of certain efforts of a potential candidate to explain this away," the bishops went on to point out, "a high ecclesiastical representative of the Roman Catholic hierarchy immediately broke into public print to correct these statements."

As to the political nature of the Roman pontiff's activities, we can but take note of West German government circles' disturbance over Pope John XXIII's confirmation of a prominent politician of the Nazi era as papal secret chamberlain. Hitler's Franz Von Papen was given this title by Pope Pius XI. Pope Pius XII rejected Von Papen's application for renewal of the title, but last July it was confirmed by Pope John XXIII. Comments at Bonn, West Germany, in governmental circles said that Herr Von Papen "has brought the present pontiff into a difficult situation. Maybe for reasons of diplomatic courtesy Pope John was unable to reject the request. But wide circles of Catholics in Germany will learn of this new honor to Von Papen with very mixed feeling." It was Von Papen who helped bring Hitler to power.

Weddings Costing Too Much?

There is a trend toward more public weddings which is good. But along with this the question is raised about the cost, particularly of formal weddings and whether or not we may have allowed commercial interests to dictate much about modern church weddings. So we are asking you to note the article in this issue on "The Cost of Formal Weddings." See page 7.

Two members of the faculty at Carson-Newman College, Professors Herbert J. Miles and Ray F. Koonce, have given us the findings of a two-months' study of members of two Sociology classes on the cost of 70 formal weddings. Such costs here in the Southeast in middle class families approaches $2,000 with higher costs in other strata of society. As an outcome of this study, the question is raised whether or not the time is now overdue to consider replacing complexity with simplicity and trim financial waste by replacing commercial wedding consultants with the services of pre-marital pastoral counsellors. The professors have given us some thought-provoking findings. They put to us some questions that should tend to bring the whole matter of weddings into a more spiritual frame of consideration.

Tennessee Baptist Survey Committee Completes Its Work

Gaye L. McGlothlen

A post-convention meeting of the Survey Committee of the Tennessee Baptist Convention was held in Nashville on November 23. It likely will be the final meeting of that committee. The committee reviewed its work of more than two years' duration. The task assigned to it was difficult and detailed, yet the members felt a high degree of satisfaction over the reception given to their work by the convention in Gatlinburg. They feel that the plans and programs approved by the convention as recommended by the committee will help Tennessee Baptists perform an increasingly greater service for the Master.

Time will be required to put all the recommendations into effect. They were made with a twenty-year expansion program in mind.

While the Executive Board cannot be enlarged to 75 until the 1960 convention, yet the Board elected at Gatlinburg will organize itself under the new committee system approved at this convention. The new Administrative Committee, its duties being less involved than is true of the former Administrative Committee, will be composed of fifteen members in keeping with the amendment adopted at Gatlinburg.

The new budgeting procedures, based on budget requests rather than on percentage distribution of funds, will begin to take effect in the summer of 1960 and the 1961 convention budgets will follow the pattern adopted for them at Gatlinburg.

The new convention committee structure must await the 1960 convention to be inaugurated as the "reporting" and "functioning" convention committees elected at Gatlinburg will serve this year. The Hospital and Education Commissions and the Baptist Press Board of Trustees can be dissolved during this year in line with the reassignment of their functions to various Executive Board committees.

The new stewardship program will be started as soon as a qualified man to head the new department can be secured.

Many of the child care recommendations have already been put into effect. The children at the Franklin Home are now enrolled in the public schools of Williamson County. The counselling and social service programs, plus the foster home and adoption programs, are receiving definite attention.

Improvement in our assistance to Christian Education on the college level should be noticed before too long. The proposed branch of Union University to be established in Memphis "as soon as possible" should help our convention reach more of our Baptist college students than our three fine colleges can do now.

Wider circulation and a more effective ministry for our valuable state paper, the BAPTIST AND REFLECTOR, should result from the recommendations relating to it, all of which were adopted.

A new study committee has been assigned the responsibility of making recommendations at the next convention about the program and future of Harrison-Chilhowee Academy.

In general, the impetus given to long-term planning in the light of priorities of need and the resources to meet those needs should help Tennessee Baptists to attain their objectives more speedily and efficiently.

The Survey Committee members realize more than they ever did before that Tennessee Baptists, working cooperatively together, have a great future before them. Enlarged goals and programs can be attained more speedily they feel now that their work as a survey group has been completed and our people begin to carry forward the Tennessee Baptist programs under the revisions adopted at Gatlinburg. To this end

Let The People Speak

by A. C. Miller

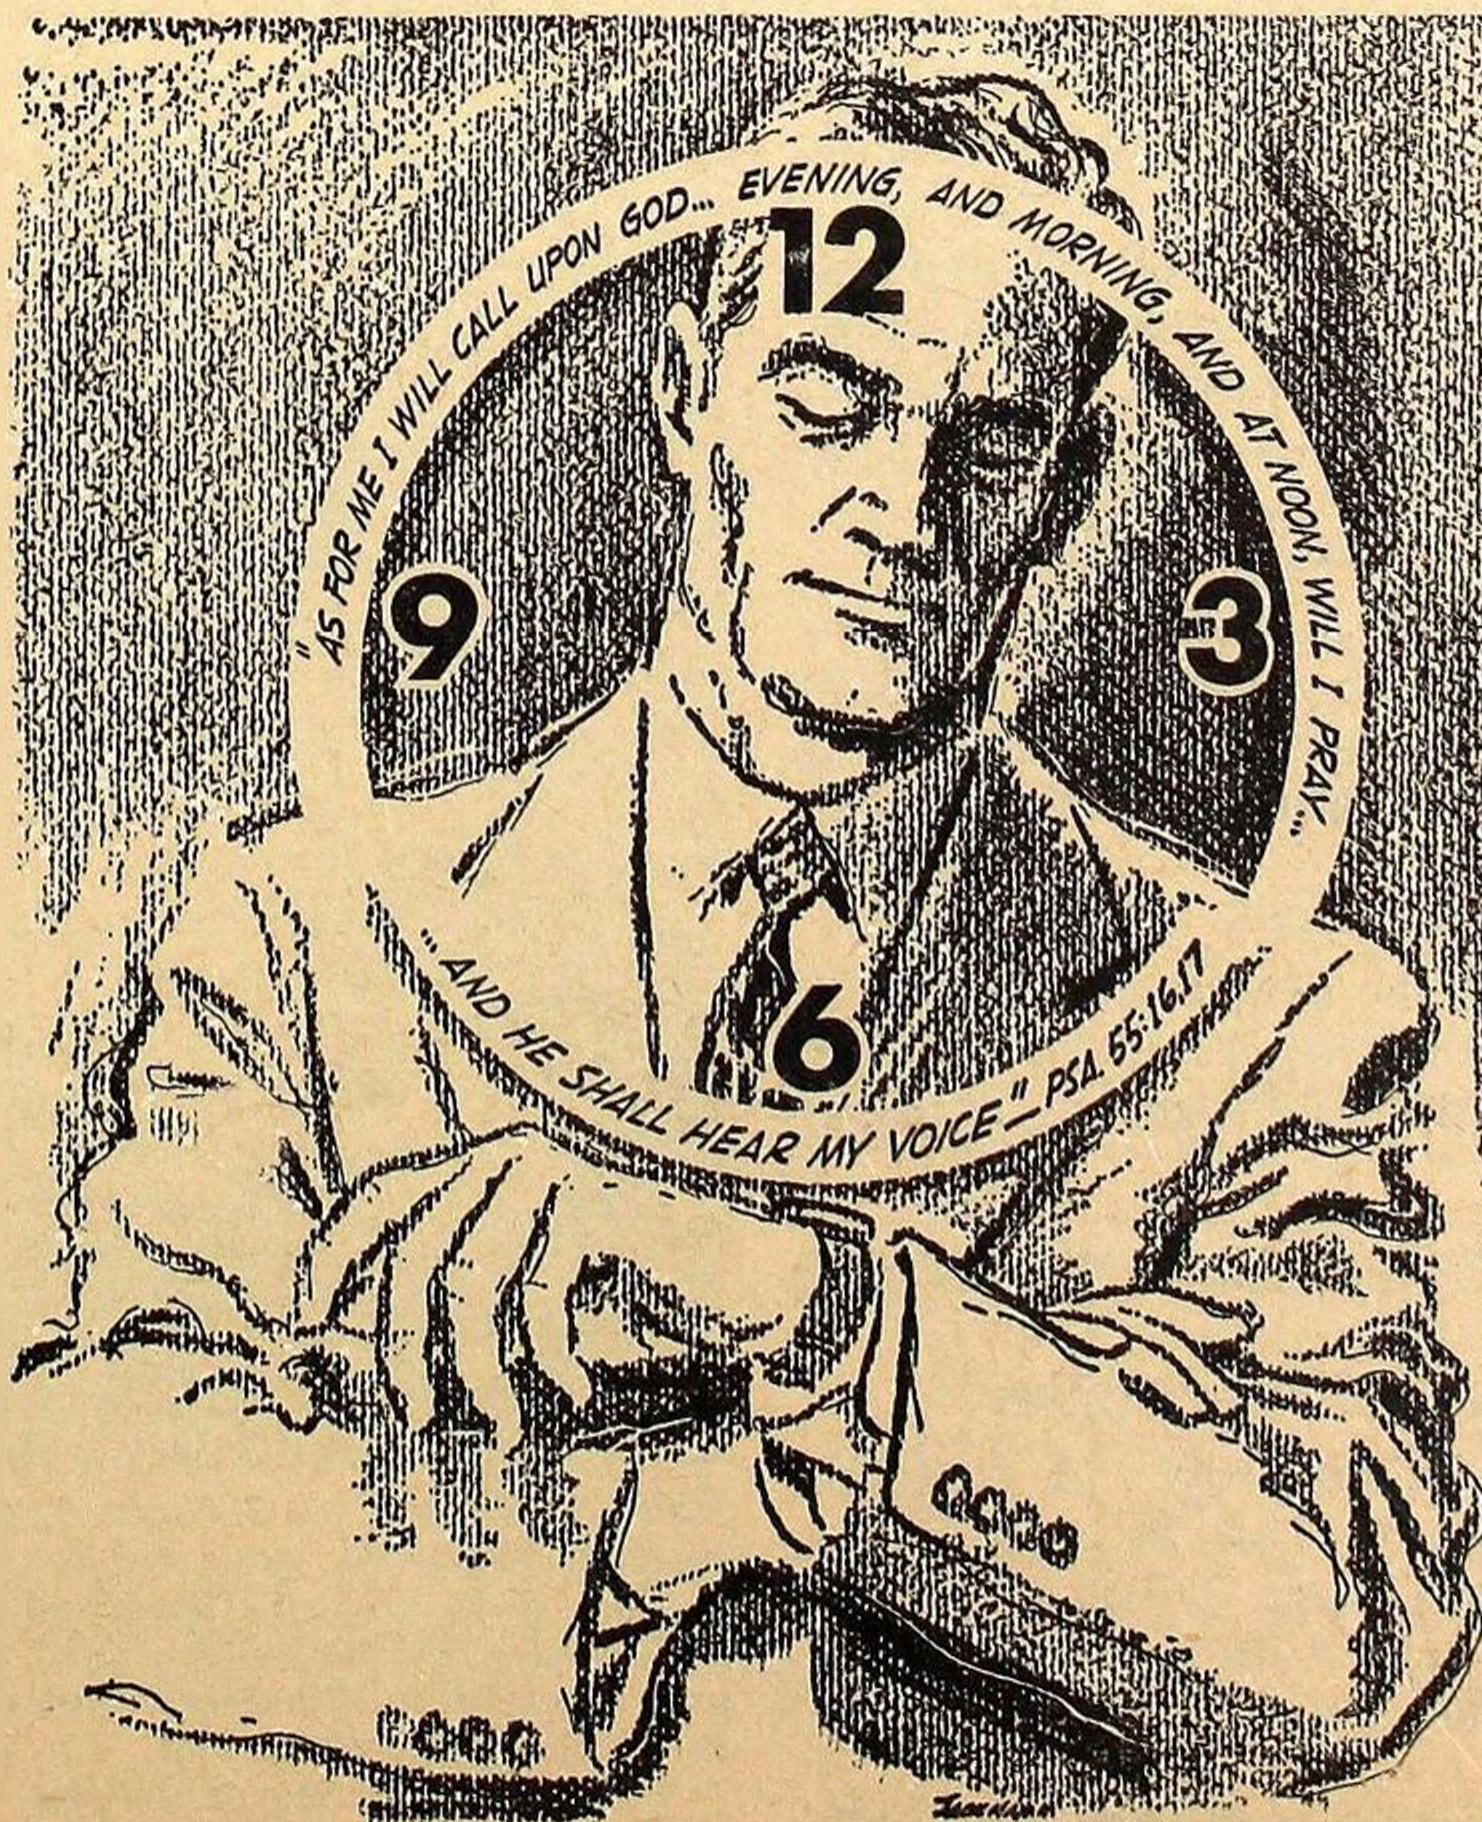

While the hike of 1c per gallon in the national gasoline tax is fresh in our minds, let us not forget that the 1958 Congress voted a tax relief to the beverage alcohol industry of over a billion dollars.

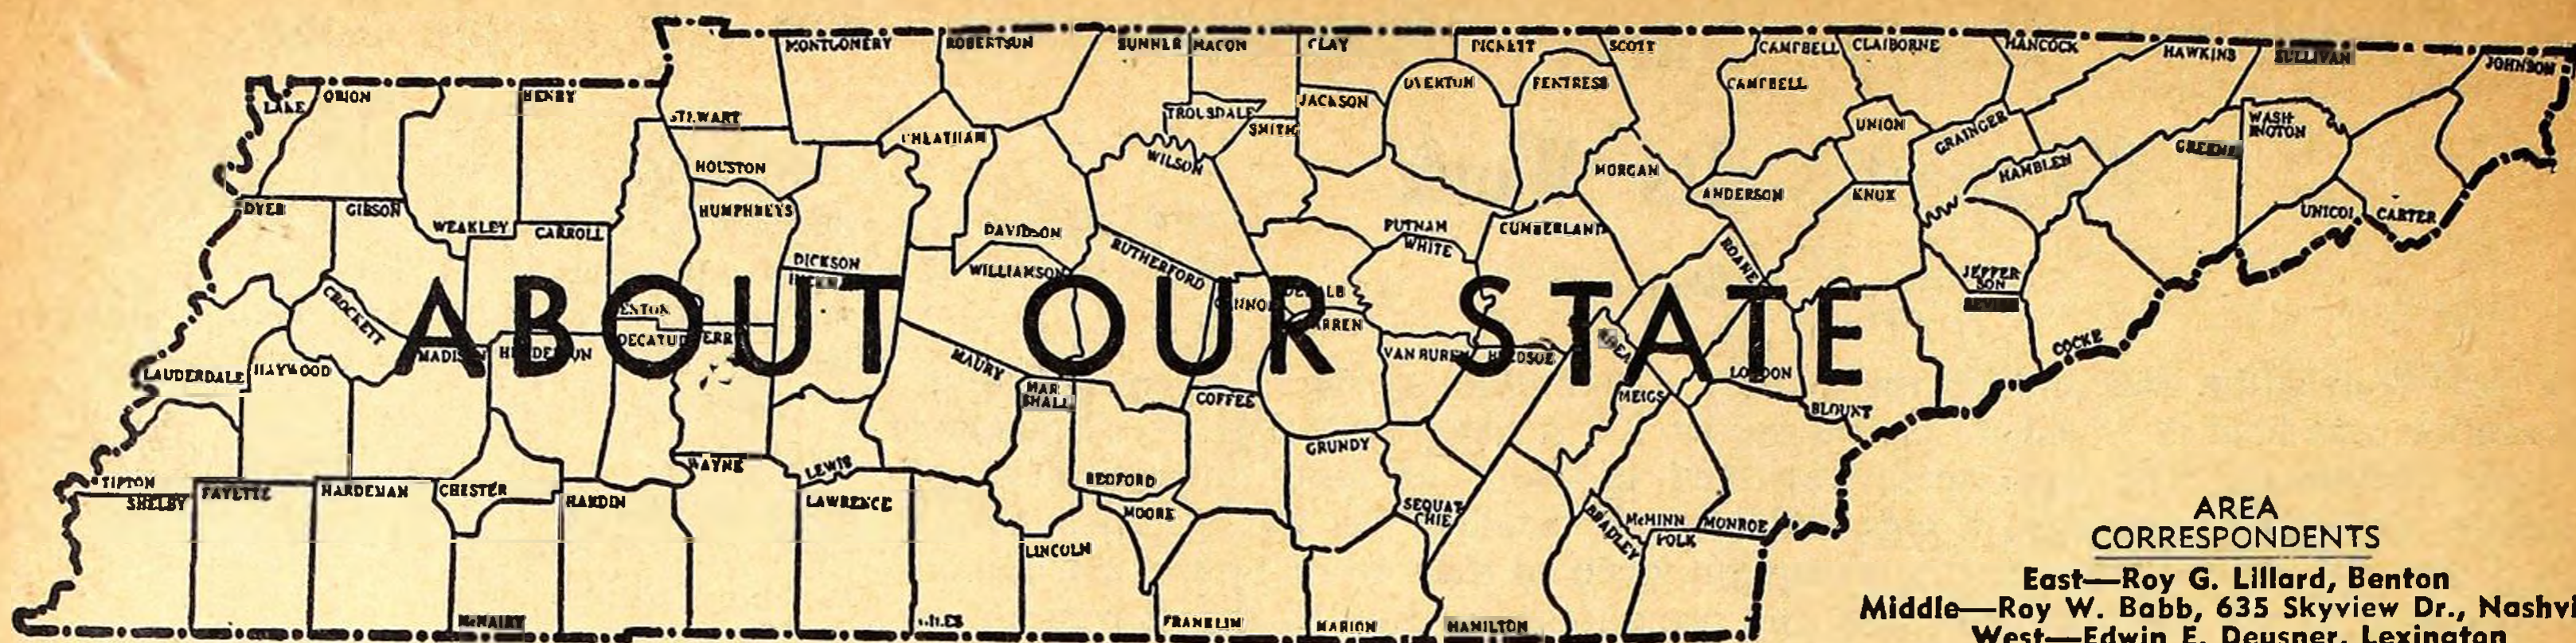

While the forced cancellation of liquor advertising by the U.S. Treasury Department and the Federal Trades Commission is fresh in our minds, let us not forget that at every public congressional hearing on bills to prohibit advertising, it has been argued by the chairman and other members of the Committee that such action could not be taken.

These ads were cancelled because they made the false claim that "beer is good for you." Liquor ads are notorious for their false claims. This whole racket of liquor advertising can be wiped out by the enforcement of legislation already enacted. Let the people speak out on the issue, and it will be wiped out. (SBC Christian Life Commission).

they dedicate themselves. They feel that Tennessee Baptists in general will join together in a renewed spirit of dedication to the Lord's work in Tennessee and around the world.

Time Well Spent

Carl Ash, formerly of Gurley, Ala., is the first pastor to be called by the recently organized Broadview Baptist Church in Duck River Association. Brother Ash who is making his home on Highway 64, near Winchester, is conducting regular services each Sunday at the new church in Broadview community. Serving a congregation of about 50 members, the church structure houses an auditorium and two Sunday school rooms at present. Four more classrooms are under construction. Steward Amacher is Sunday school superintendent.

Bailey Stone, pastor of Longview Heights Church, Memphis, was the evangelist for two revivals in the Memphis area which resulted in 77 decisions. At Fairlawn Church, where John Gilbert is pastor, there were 57 decisions including 15 by profession of faith. At Barton Heights where Chester Hart is pastor, there were 20 decisions including four by profession.

... Dr. G. Allen West, pastor of Woodmont Baptist Church, Nashville, will give the sermon on the CBS network "Radio Program of the Air" Jan. 17.

The program is produced by the Southern Baptist Radio-TV Commission in Fort Worth and released by tape transcription out of CBS's New York City broadcasting facilities.

Persia Church of Holston Valley Association received the Certificate of Merit from the Training Union Department, being one of the eleven churches in the state to receive this honor.

G. E. Snell is the new pastor of Antioch Church in Madison-Chester Association. He was formerly missionary in McNairy Association.

All About Christmas

What - when - where - why. A charming booklet of Christmas Firsts, Pictures, Stories, Customs, Legends, Ideas. Order direct from Ruby Lee Adams, Author, 219-9th Ave. North, Nashville, Tenn. Price $1.25.

Jimmy Yarbrough, pastor of McDowell Road Church, Jackson, Miss., since its organization in 1954, recently resigned to become pastor of Hillcrest Church, Lebanon, Tenn. The McDowell Road congregation membership is 550 with a budget of $38,000 adopted for 1960. Fifty-four were added by baptism and 91 by letter last year.

Woodland Mills Church near Union City broke ground for a new educational building, recently. Elbert Burcham, Jr., chairman of the building committee, turned the first spade of dirt while R. R. Thompson, chairman of the deacons, took up the spade for the second turning. The one-story annex will be 60x32 feet and will be constructed of brick veneer. The church was first organized on another site in 1869 when a small, one-room frame structure was built. Several years later a larger building was erected but the church was moved to its present site in 1926. The church underwent an extensive expansion program in 1949 when a new auditorium was constructed. Elven D. Hensley is pastor.

Many friends in Tennessee remember gratefully the late Dr. Hampton C. Hopkins, once beloved pastor at First Church, Lenoir City, and before that at Siam Church Elizabethton. His informal biography "He Had to Preach" has just been written by his widow, Mrs. Hopkins, now of 866 77th Way South, Birmingham 6, Alabama. Dr. Hopkins held prominent pastorates in Alabama. He also led the Extension Department of Howard College, Birmingham. He was a man of great courage, devotion and ability. The story of his sacrificial life inspires all who read. The book will be available in our Baptist book stores.

BAPTIST AND REFLECTOR appreciates the fine commendation of Bobby G. Johnson written by his pastor, James B. Dotson, of Faith Baptist Church, Spenard, Alaska. Bobby, now a student at Belmont College, is experienced both as an educational director and music leader. He has slides of our Baptist work in Alaska and will be glad to show them to any church or group interested.

The Cost Of Formal Weddings

During the first five months of 1959 the members of two sociology classes of Carson-Newman College surveyed the cost of seventy formal weddings. Only those who had had formal ceremonies were included in the sample. These weddings took place during 1957 and 1958. The students sent questionnaires designed to measure the cost of formal weddings to their friends who had recently married. After filling in the questionnaires, the couples returned them to the sociology department, either by mail or by the student researcher.

A formal wedding was defined as a public wedding, held in a church, that was characterized by (1) formal invitations, (2) formal dress, (3) formal decorations, (4) a formal ceremony and (5) a formal reception. It often includes in varied forms such other items as a wedding consultant, a rehearsal dinner, a bridesmaids' luncheon, and the services of a photographer.

Since Carson-Newman students come, very largely, from middle-class homes, we may assume that their friends were of this class; and, therefore, the weddings measured were largely middle-class weddings. The couples in the sample were located in the Southeastern part of the United States.

The cost of specific items reported below refers to the average cost of each item unless otherwise stated. For example, only 68 weddings paid the officiating minister a fee. The other two indicated that the officiating minister was either the father or brother of the bride or groom and would not accept a fee. The average paid to the officiating minister by the sixty-eight members of the sample was $17.65. The fee paid to the organist was $9.77, and the fee paid to the soloist was $9.40. The wedding dress cost $138.25, and the wedding veil $28.17. The bride's trousseau was $192.39. The flowers, corsages and church decorations averaged $211.16. The reception, including food, refreshments, decorations, and help cost $220.39. The couples spent $4.70 for the license, $68.20 for invitations and postage, and $21.52 for thank-you notes and postage. The rehearsal dinner cost $57.67, and the luncheon for the bridesmaids $29.85. The rings cost $201.77; the gifts the bride and groom gave to each other cost $56.35; and gifts for the members of the wedding party, $36.28. The expense entailed in the newspaper story of the wedding was $11.76, and $90.85 was paid for the photographer's services and pictures.

The average total cost in actual money spent for the seventy formal weddings surveyed was $1,311.37. This amount is large, but it is not really the total picture. In the first place, there were probably many other hidden expenses such as transportation, hotel bills, and medical fees that did not find their way into the questionnaire figures. Several couples wrote on the bottom of the questionnaire such statements as, "This is all we can think of now. We are certain our wedding cost more than this figure." In the second place, many of the weddings surveyed did not include some of the items listed above. Many of the members of the sample, in order to cut expenses, cut on some items, or eliminated them. A formal wedding including every item involved in middle-class formal weddings, paid for at the average rates paid by those of the sample who did include these items in their wedding, would cost a grand total of $1,804.66. This figure, $1,804.66, would be the approximate actual cost of a complete middle-class formal wedding in the Southeastern part of the United States. When some probable hidden expenses are included, the figure would be higher. In our opinion, in this section of the United States the actual cost of middle-class formal weddings approaches $2000; upper-middle-class weddings, $3000 or more and upper-class weddings, much more.

By Herbert J. Miles

With the expense of formal weddings before us, it is in order to raise some questions. Certainly all would agree that the wedding ceremony is an important milestone in every couple's life and should be treated with esteem as something significant and dignified. But why must the cost of weddings be excessive and extravagant? Is it not possible to have a dignified wedding at much less expense? Does the cost of a wedding guarantee the success of the marriage? Is it the bride and groom who are responsible for the high cost of weddings, or is it the result of a gradual cultural drift, much of which is promoted by vested interests? Should not the emphasis at a wedding be focused upon the young couple, the taking of the vows, the establishing of a new home, and the sacredness of the total relationship?

When an invited guest attends the average formal wedding, what does he observe? Too often he will witness an emphasis upon external and material things. He will be swept off his feet by a lavish display of flowers, a lavish display of corsages; a lavish display of decorations; a lavish display of dresses, suits and costumes; and a lavish display of other decor such as candelabra, arches, floor coverings, etc. In the midst of this labyrinth of externals it is difficult for the invited guest to concentrate upon the person of the bride and groom, and the sacredness, the significance, and meaning of the wedding vows. Have we not allowed commercial interests to make complete financial and social fools out of ourselves at modern church weddings, in a similar manner as we have at funerals, Easter services and Christmas observances?

Could not the large amounts of money wasted at many formal weddings be used more wisely to purchase a lot on which to build a home, to buy furniture, to further education, or to start a savings account? In the sample studied, the wedding dress and veil together cost $182.15. Ordinarily the formal wedding dress can be worn only once. Then it is usually put in a moth-proof container and placed first in the closet, later in the attic and finally destroyed as excess clutter. Occasionally a dress is worn again by a daughter or another relative. But this is not very satisfactory because most girls want a wedding dress of their own, and usually dresses 25 years old are not suitable for wearing. Would it not be a wiser procedure if the $182.15 that is wasted on a one-wear dress and veil could be used to purchase two street dresses and two suits at $45.00 each for the bride and groom, one to wear in the wedding and one for going away? These dresses and suits could be worn many, many times by the couple in the ensuing years, and each time they were worn it would be a symbolic reminder of the happy memories and endearments of their wedding day.

Would not one modest but beautiful bouquet of flowers bear as much symbolic meaning and significance at a wedding as a lavish and wasteful display? There are many, many occasions throughout married life when a rosebud or a corsage speaks volumes. Would not fewer flowers at the wedding ceremony and more of them scattered "through the years" contribute to strengthening the marriage?

In our opinion, the trend toward more public weddings is good. Youth has some social obligations to their neighbors, friends, and the community. A church wedding where the public is invited says to the community, neighbors, and friends, "Thank you so much for your contribution to our lives." However, does not the invitation to attend the wedding ceremony meet the couple's social responsibility to the community? If the answer is "Yes," it follows that it is unnecessary to waste $220 on a wedding reception. (We are assuming that a small get-acquainted meeting can be arranged between the families and close friends at rehearsal time or some time previous to the ceremony. We do not have space to reply to the weighty argument that this might mean that the bride and groom would see each other on their wedding day previous to the ceremony. However, those interested in this subject can find the details in any standard work on pagan superstitions.) Besides the financial waste, many receptions take advantage of guests by demanding much more of their time than is necessary. Also it adds to the already heightened emotional strain and physical fatigue of the bride and groom. (One bride and groom stood wearily in the reception for four long hours.) By the time a couple finally escape from the hungry jaws of social palaver and folderol they are ready for a week in a hospital to recuperate from this public spectacle, rather than being prepared for a week's quiet, relaxed, happy honeymoon, which they richly deserve.

The Cost Of Formal Weddings

Certainly a normal amount of money spent for such items as rings and pictures could not be considered waste. We fear that too often the community competition of each family trying to out-do the other one in big weddings, receptions, etc., is the result of insecure, frustrated social climbers. These same social climbers many times use others as their ladder to climb their way to social prestige. For example, they have the attitude that every invitation sent means more gifts for them. Consequently, every relative, friend, and acquaintance receives one. Persons should never be used as a means to selfish ends.

To those who object to these ideas, we would inquire, is there no place in modern society for such concepts as wisdom, reason, judgment, thrift, restraint, modesty, and humility? If these concepts are to be used anywhere, should they not be used to plan and control such an important thing as the ceremony (sociologists call it "rite of passage") which ushers youth out of singleness into marriage? Are selfish vested interests and frustrated social climbers really qualified to direct our spiritual, moral, and social organizations?

The extremes to which many families will go in big formal weddings is nothing short of ridiculous. One family, owing so many people in town that their credit was judged worthless by the credit bureau, spent $3,000 on a formal wedding for their daughter.

Equally foolish in wedding extremes was a widow living in a large midwestern city with three children, who borrowed $1400 for a formal wedding for her daughter and started repaying it at $15 per week out of her salary. When the daughter had been married one month, she called her mother long distance, collect, and told her that her marriage was on the rocks, and asked for train fare home.

The motive causing such weddings may not always stem from selfish interests of the families involved. The social pressure of the community may actually force some people into doing things that conflict with their judgment. Such was the situation with a certain couple in a large southern city. They were not over the financial shock of their first daughter's wedding when the second daughter was ready for marriage. In a family conference it was agreed that she would have a small simple home wedding, and that the parents would give the daughter a check for the difference between the cost of her simple wedding and her sister's large formal wedding, which would be somewhere between $1000 and $1500. Everyone concerned was happy with the decision. However, when this decision became public, the social pressure and tyranny that descended on the family was so great that they were forced to capitulate and splurge on a big formal wedding.

In our opinion, a thorough study of preparation for the wedding and the wedding ceremony is long overdue. The study should certainly consider (1) the replacing of complexity with simplicity; (2) the elimination of superstitions; (3) the modernizing and Christianizing of the verbal and musical ritual; (4) the use and preservation of meaningful symbols; (5) the equality of the bride and groom in the ceremony; (6) the equality of the parents in the ceremony; (7) the elimination of financial waste by replacing commercial wedding consultants with the services of pre-marital pastoral counselors, who give spiritual, social, physical and organizational counseling; (8) the replacing of the usual pre-marriage hysterical pace with its built-in strains, frustrations, and exhaustion with a calm, happy period of spiritual, emotional, and personal enjoyment designed to prepare the couple for marriage instead of a superficial ceremony; and (9) the bringing of wedding invitations into the realm of Christian ethics instead of using them as a social blackmail to collect loot from acquaintances.
